Indian American Organization HAF Helps Serve Pakistani Refugees with Medical Services

The refugees suffer from a wide range of physical and mental health conditions

WASHINGTON (TIP): The Hindu America Foundation (HAF) in partnership with the Sindhi Alliance, recently provide critical medical services to Pakistani Hindu refugees living in makeshift settlements and camps in Jodhpur, India. HAF raised $17,600, which is being disbursed as an ongoing grant to the Universal Just Action Society (UJAS), the primary non-governmental organization working with Pakistani Hindu refugees in Jodhpur.

So far, $8,533 has been used to help the refugees through the following initiatives:

- Engaged with government stakeholders and assisted 900 refugees complete registration for migrant health cards to facilitate admission into health facilities that provide services beyond the scope of the health clinic
- Established and staffed a health clinic in Jodhpur; hosted several medical camps in settlements; and provided medical consultations, medicinal support, and vaccinations
- Held hygiene awareness and health education seminars and distributed health/hygiene education materials
- Created community health and hygiene committees in three refugee settlements to empower refugees to take initiatives to improve community health

The refugees suffer from a wide range of physical and mental health conditions, such as situational depression, anxiety, psychosomatic disorders, high incidence of respiratory disease, hypertension, malnutrition and lifestyle disorders, and infectious diseases. Women, children, and elderly refugees, in particular, remain vulnerable to various health risks and face psycho-social trauma from their experience of suffering religious persecution and fleeing their homes. Many of the refugees avoid going to healthcare facilities due to their illiteracy and lack of health awareness, as well as an absence of civil and legal documents required to access basic facilities. They also fear harassment if they disclose that they are Pakistani nationals.

Ms. Kaalu, a 67-year old woman that fled Pakistan and is now living in a refugee settlement in Aaganwa village in Jodhpur, for instance, is one of many refugees that has received assistance through this project.

Ms. Kaalu and her family, including her husband, son, daughter-in-law, grandson, and granddaughter, are struggling to survive economically and are dealing with several health issues. She had been experiencing chest pain for at least a month, but due to a lack of health education and awareness and an inability to access a medical facility, she was unable to receive adequate care for her condition. She indicated that she avoided going to government hospitals out of fear that she would be turned away as a refugee without proper identity documents and because of her poor family economic conditions.

When UJAS organized a health camp at her settlement, she was identified as a priority patient in critical health condition and was seen by a first aid doctor and the UJAS team helped facilitate her access to Mahatma Gandhi Hospital, Jodhpur. Ms. Kaalu is now hopeful that she will be able to receive proper treatment to alleviate her critical health conditions and live a happy and healthy life again.

Indian Americans among top investors in residential property in US

MUMBAI (TIP): A Times of India report published July 21 says that the pall of gloom owing to protectionist policies has not kept Indians residing in the US from investing in real estate. By purchasing residential property worth $7.8 billion during the 12-month period ending March 2017, Indians emerged as the fifth largest investors in real estate in the US. Backed by mortgage finance, these properties were largely acquired for use as primary residence or for use by a child studying in the US.

Chinese nationals were the biggest buyers, purchasing residential property worth $31.7 billion in the same period. They were followed by the Canadians, British, Mexicans and, lastly, Indians.

Between April 2015 and March 2016, Indians had invested $6.1 billion and occupied third place on the list of biggest buyers. However, a surge of investments from other nationalities resulted in Indians slipping to fifth position in 2016-17.

The bulk of buyers from China, India, and Mexico were working and residing in the US, while most buyers from Canada and the UK were non-resident buyers, adds the report, "2017- Profile of international activity in US residential real estate" released recently by the National Association of Realtors (NAR).

More than a third of the Chinese buyers purchased residential property in California. Compared to the other major foreign buyers, Indians were not as concentrated in any state in the US and the location of their jobs largely determined their purchase. While California, New Jersey, Texas, Massachusetts, and Kentucky were top destinations, more than two in five Indian buyers purchased in another state.

In aggregate, foreign buyers purchased $153 billion of residential property in US between April 2016 and March 2017, which is a 49% jump from the figure of the corresponding previous period of $102.6 billion. In terms of number of units, foreign buyers purchased 2.84 lakh residential properties in US in April 2016-March 2017, up 32% from the previous period's figure of 2.14 lakh properties.

On an average, foreign buyers paid $536,852 for their properties, 12% more than the average price during the previous 12-month period. The average purchase price of properties bought by Indians was $522,440.

"The political and economic uncertainty both here and abroad did not deter foreigners from exponentially ramping up their purchases of US property over the past year," said Lawrence Yun, NAR's chief economist. "While the strengthening of the US dollar in relation to other currencies and steadfast home-price growth made buying a home more expensive in many areas, foreigners increasingly acted on their beliefs that the US is a safe and secure place to live, work and invest," he added.

While a stronger dollar makes it more expensive to purchase US property, fears of a further weakening of a local currency against the dollar prompts some foreign buyers to accelerate their purchase.

Referring to the value of the Indian rupee, the report says it depreciated modestly (by 2%) relative to the dollar over the entire survey period. However, post-demonetization in November 2016, which caused a severe liquidity squeeze, the rupee reversed course and began to appreciate.

From November 2016 to March 2017 (the end of the survey period), the rupee had appreciated nearly 3% against the dollar. Data from June 2017 shows that the rupee had strengthened nearly 5% against the dollar from November 2016, suggesting that terms could improve for Indian buyers of US real estate next year. (Source: TOI)

Indian Origin Man Sentenced for Citizenship Fraud

NEW YORK (TIP): An Indian American Gurpreet Singh (37) of Watertown, New York, was sentenced on July 14 in federal court in Syracuse to three months in prison to be followed by three years of supervised release, following a jury trial in January where he was convicted of knowingly obtaining U.S. citizenship through unlawful naturalization, announced Acting United States Attorney Grant C. Jaquith and James C. Spero, Special Agent in Charge, Homeland Security Investigations (HSI), Buffalo, New York.

Because of this conviction, Singh's U.S. citizenship will be revoked by law.

The trial evidence showed that Singh, who is originally from India, repeatedly affirmed to United States Citizenship and Immigration (USCIS) authorities that he had not committed any crimes for which he was not arrested. Immigration authorities later learned that the defendant sexually abused a 9-year-old child during the same time-period he was applying for U.S. citizenship. Evidence presented at trial demonstrated that Singh deliberately failed to report his criminal activity to USCIS because he knew that USCIS would not have approved his naturalization application if the agency had known about his crimes. Singh pled guilty in New York state court to a single count of sexual abuse of a minor child, after he had become a naturalized U.S. citizen. Singh was arrested by the City of Watertown (New York) Police Department the day after his naturalization ceremony in April 2012.

While on supervised release following his prison term, Singh will be required to register as a sex offender and will be prohibited from having direct contact with children under the age of 18 (other than his own) and from going to places where children under 18 are likely to congregate, such as parks, libraries, and schools, without prior permission of a probation officer.

MICE CAUGHT ON TAPE AT A DALLAS CHIPOTLE

DALLAS (TIP): CNN Money says Chipotle's stock fell on Thursday, July 20, as the company suffered another public setback: Customers complained that they saw rodents in a Dallas location.

"A few mice did get inside one restaurant from the outside due to a small structural gap in the building," Chipotle Mexican Grill (CMG) spokeswoman Quinn Kelsey said Thursday. "Management immediately removed them, and the gap has been repaired."

Diners took video of the mice skittering through the restaurant on Tuesday.

The stock was down 4.5% on Thursday and Chipotle (CMG)'s share price has dropped about 10% over the last five trading days.

"We've been in touch with our guests to offer our sincere apologies," Kelsey said. "This is an extremely isolated incident, but of course it's not anything we'd ever want our guests to encounter."

The chain has more than 2,200 restaurants in the United States.

The company on Wednesday said it had reopened and thoroughly sanitized a location in Sterling, Virginia, that had to be temporarily shuttered after people contracted norovirus or a similar illness after eating at the restaurant.

Hundreds of Chipotle customers were sickened by E. coli and norovirus in 2015 at about a dozen restaurants, prompting the chain's first quarterly loss and a nationwide four-hour shutdown for a companywide cleaning course.

At NBA summer league, Satnam Singh is still fighting for his chance trapped Adams, leaving Ding wide open from beyond the arc. Adams swung the ball over, and the 2017 Chinese Basketball Association MVP swished a straight-on 3 to the tune of hundreds of elated Asian-American fans busting out in applause.

All the while, Satnam Singh -- a 7-foot-2 center and the first Indian-born player drafted into the NBA -- stared on from the end of the Mavericks bench. Challenged with igniting hoops enthusiasm halfway across the world, he must climb a steep ladder to catch the attention of his home country.

While Ding merits his own acclaim, it is hard to imagine that an arena full of fans would have trekked to Las Vegas in the dead of July for NBA summer league had Yao Ming not come before him. But what happens when you're not a bona fide All Star such as Yao? The truth is, two years after being selected by the Mavs in the second round of the 2015 NBA draft, Singh -- the face of Indian basketball -- is still toiling away, fighting for minutes in the NBA's development league with the Texas Legends.

However, Singh's resolve remains steadfast. And even if he hasn't increased his minutes or on-court opportunities, observation alone has proved an invaluable experience. He spent two anxiety-ridden years champing at the bit, watching the clock and wondering when his name would be called. He now has learned not to focus on what he can't control.

"I was stressing my mind," Singh said. "Always thinking, 'I need time. I need time.' Whereas now, nothing is happening. If I waste my time like that, I get too much pressure on my mind. I lost everything."

It helped that the Mavs were a wrecking squad en route to the summer league championship in Orlando this year, providing the garbage-time minutes Singh so desperately craves to hone his abilities.

"If I get a couple minutes, I just rebound and finish the shot," he said. "Focus on running, keep running up and down the court."

In that game against Phoenix, which Dallas won 88-77 on Sunday, Singh played in the final two minutes, boxing out and putting the hurt on any Sun who dared venture near the rim. Toiling away in the background and hustling up and down the court in the hopes of maybe one day becoming the fourth big man in an NBA rotation isn't exactly the easiest sell. But to understand Singh's potential, you also must understand how far Singh has come in such a short period of time -- and against what odds. Born in Ballo Ke, a tiny village in the state of Punjab, he was destined to a life of wheat farming, until his father took a life-defining chance at the suggestion of a friend and sent Singh to Ludhiana, a nearby city, to play basketball. It was there that the IMG Academy in Florida granted him a three-month scholarship that eventually stretched out to the day he declared for the draft. Starting at 14 years old, Singh not only was tasked with perfecting a new sport among lifelong prospects but also learning to speak English, a language with which he had no familiarity. In many ways, it is remarkable that he is even here at all.

OJ Simpson Granted Parole

Early release from Prison in early October likely

NEVADA (TIP): A Nevada parole board, on July 20, unanimously granted O.J. Simpson early release from the Lovelock Correctional Center. The former football star could be free as soon as October 1.

Simpson, 70, has served nine years of a nine-to-33-year prison sentence for the 2007 armed robbery and kidnapping in Las Vegas.

"Are you humbled by this incarceration?" Simpson was asked by a member of the parole board.

"I wish this never would have happened," he replied, adding later: "I am sorry that things turned out the way they did."

The board told Simpson his 1995 acquittal wouldn't be a factor in its decision. On Thursday, he told the parole board: "I've done my time. I've done it as well and as respectfully as I think anybody can ... I want to get back to my kids."

The former football star has served nine years in prison for the 2007 armed robbery and kidnapping in Las Vegas.

Indian American Golfer Sahith Theegala wins Sahalee Players Championship

Theegala is a rising junior at Pepperdine

SAN JOSE (TIP): Indian American Golfer Sahith Theegala of Chino Hills, Calif. birdied the first playoff hole to win the 23rd Sahalee Players Championship (SPC), outlasting Min Woo Lee of Australia. The elite amateur championship was held at Sahalee Country Club in Sammamish, Wash.

After 72 holes, the two players were tied at 3-under par, and went back to play the par-5 18th hole again. Theegala hit his second shot to the back edge of the green, hole high. Lee flared his second shot into the trees on the right, and after a free drop from an embedded lie punched a remarkable 150-yard shot through the trees to 45 feet from the hole. Lee then two-putted for par, and Theegala dropped a 5-footer for birdie and the win.

Theegala started final round with a five-shot lead, but with the swirling winds adding to already difficult final-round playing conditions, the day quickly became a game of survival. The scoring average for the final round was 77.27.

Theegala is a rising junior at Pepperdine, finishing his sophomore year as WCC Co-Player of the Year and selected as semifinalist for the Jack Nicklaus Award. He qualified for this year's U.S. Open at Erin Hills, and in two weeks will compete in the 51st Pacific Coast Amateur Championship, being held at Chambers Bay in University Place, Wash.

The SPC was rated an "A" event in the World Amateur Golf Rankings (WAGR) before taking a hiatus last year while the club hosted the KPMG Women's PGA Championship, and each year the event draws an international field of the finest amateur players. Five of the previous 13 SPC champions have gone on to win the Ben Hogan Award, given to the nation's top collegiate golfer and the list of previous SPC participants now playing on the PGA Tour continues to grow each year.

Past champions of this prestigious amateur championship include Kyle Stanley, Casey Martin, Peter Uihlein, Nick Taylor, Daniel Summerhays, Ryan Moore, Chris Williams, Arron Oberholser and Jason Gore, among others, all of whom would go on to win the PGA or European tours. The SPC scoring record at Sahalee is the 16-under 272 (68-69-68-67) shot in 2004 by Moore, a native of Puyallup, Wash.

Sahalee Country Club has been the site of the SPC since 1992, and has hosted numerous top-level events in golf, including the 1974 PINGA Men's Amateur, 1978 Pacific Coast Amateur, 1998 PGA Championship, 2002 WGC-NEC Invitational, 2010 U.S. Senior Open, and 2016 KPMG Women's PGA Championship.

An Unfazed Jeff Sessions decides to stay on despite Trump's annoyance with him

WASHINGTON (TIP): Attorney General Jeff Sessions says he plans to stay on the job. That wouldn't be news except that in an interview with The New York Times, July 19, President Trump openly criticized Sessions for recusing himself from Russia investigation. Trump said that if he knew then what he knows now, he wouldn't have nominated Sessions to be the attorney general. "Sessions should have never recused himself, and if he would - if he was going to recuse himself, he should have told me before he took the job, and I would have picked somebody else", Trump said in the interview.

Sessions said that he had the "honor of serving as attorney general," and that he plans "to continue to do so as long as that is appropriate." Asked whether he could keep running the Justice Department given Trump's comments, he responded: "I'm totally confident that we can continue to run this office in an effective way."

Attorney General Jeff Sessions says he loves his job and vows to keep on doing it. But his boss, President Trump, just publicly disclosed he's angry at Sessions for his recusal from the Russia probe.

Meanwhile, President Trump has no plans to fire Jeff Sessions, his spokesperson said Thursday, July 20, even after his extraordinary attacks cast doubt on the fate of the attorney general and Robert Mueller, the special counsel leading the Russia investigation.

While Trump still disagrees with Sessions' decision to recuse himself from the Russia investigation, White House spokeswoman Sarah Sanders said, "clearly, he has confidence in him, or he would not be attorney general."

"Zee making the world a better place", says FCC's Ajit Pai

WASHINGTON D.C. (TIP): Zee entertainment launched an annual program to identify and honor individuals and organizations who have demonstrated outstanding leadership in the media & entertainment sector.

Chairman Ajit Pai, was conferred with the inaugural "Zee Entertainment National Leadership Awards" at a special event on Capitol Hill this past week. He is the first Indian American to lead the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) in the US. Zee Entertainment is the biggest multicultural programmer in the United States with 35 networks in 14 languages.

Amit Goenka, CEO International Broadcast Business said, "The selection of our inaugural honoree was not a difficult choice as he demonstrated a great commitment to promoting and protecting consumer interests particularly in our case in the areas of healthy living, wellness, news and entertainment."

The exclusive, by invite-only event saw more than 200 people in attendance from Washington DC's power corridors which included nearly 25 congressmen and other very notable dignitaries. The 44-year old Republican attorney, Ajit Pai came across as very affable, conscious of his humble beginnings and deeply appreciative of his meteoric rise to the top of the federal agency. At the event, Pai acknowledged Dr. Subhash Chandra's incredible achievement in creating a company like Zee, quite literally from nothing into the multimedia conglomerate that entertains about a billion people worldwide, despite the many roadblocks. Where people did not have the option to watch Bollywood movies at home in the US, Zee pioneered and changed the way people had access to content from India accessible to the Indian diaspora across the world 20 years ago.

In continuation with Zee's ethos; "Vasudhaiya Kutumbakam" (The World is my Family), Zee speaks not only to the Indians here but also to millions of Americans via Z Living which is a Health & Wellness network. It is America's fastest growing network and stands firm behind its mantra "Prevention is better than cure". Zee also speaks to the millions of Latino audiences in the country through its unique Bollywood in Spanish channel; Zee Mundo.

An extension to this core belief in Health and Wellness, Zee has a one of its kind Natural Wellness Center, YO1 which stands for Yoga and Oneness. The idea behind this Wellness Center which is spread over 1300 acres in upstate NY is to focus on bringing our mind, body and soul as one. Along with Entertainment, Zee strongly believes in giving back to the community with its initiatives like Sarthi, ZEE is Green, Ekal Vidyalaya and the DSC foundation which just donated 1 Billion dollars for social entrepreneurship causes. The Zee is Green initiative was conferred a special Excellence award at IAA Olive Crown Awards 2016 for its leadership in various environmental projects. Also, Ekal Vidyalaya popularly known as A People's Movement has been educating 1.5 million students across 54,000 free schools in India.

Since Zee Entertainment has become synonymous with the Indian culture and Indians globally, it was a natural choice for the republican party to engage and partner with Zee Network to engage the Indian diaspora during the Trump Presidential campaign, Zee not only effectively planned and executed a 360 degree campaign, but it also coined the winning phrase; Ab ki Baar Trump Sarkar (This time, A Trump Government). The Republicans were smart enough to understand Indian Americans influence on the larger canvas, said Sameer Targe. Efforts included a Bollywood gala in NJ which had Donald Trump as the keynote speaker and Zee's own SRGMP singers who were the real crowd pullers.

Indian pharma companies with their plants in the US make it big

NEW YORK (TIP): An Economic Times report says the US markets account for over 40 percent of the total revenue of the top four Indian drugmakers. Many members of the Indian Pharmaceutical Association (IPA) have their own plants in the US, even though their main revenue comes from Indian imports.

Here's the list of top five Indian companies which have plants in the US.

SUN PHARMA: The Sun Pharmaceutical Industries Ltd is the largest Indian pharma company in the US, which is also functioning in more than 150 countries all over the world. The company was established by Dilip Shangvi in 1983 and was acquired by another pharmaceutical giant Ranbaxy in 2014.

Sun Pharma has two plants in New Jersey and has one each in Philadelphia, Detroit, Wilmington, and Chicago. The company markets a large basket of generics in the US, with a strong pipeline awaiting approval from the US Food and Drug Administration (USFDA). The USFDA sent a warning notice to Sun in December 2016 about nine violations at its manufacturing plant in Halol, Gujarat.

The company requested the USFDA to withdraw approval for 28 Abbreviated New Drug Applications (ANDAs) belonging to its wholly owned subsidiary Ranbaxy Laboratories.

LUPIN: Lupin Ltd is a transactional pharmaceutical company based in Mumbai founded by Desh Bandhu Gupta.

It entered the US generic pharmaceutical market in 2003 as Lupin Pharmaceuticals Inc with the ANDA approval for Cefuroxime Axetil Tablets. It is the fifth-largest generic pharmaceutical company in the US by prescription-led market share and is one of the fastest growing pharmaceutical companies in the US. Headquartered in Baltimore, Maryland, the company has plants in Somerset and New Jersey.

Lupin received more than 75 FDA approvals till now and it's US brand business contributed 9% of total US sales whereas the generics business contributed 91 percent during the financial year 2014-15.

DR. REDDY'S LABORATORIES: Dr. Reddy's Laboratories was founded by Dr K Anji Reddy in 1984 and is based in Hyderabad, Telangana. The company manufactures and markets a wide range of pharmaceuticals in India and overseas. It began as a supplier to Indian drug manufacturers and later focused on getting approval from drug regulators such as the USFDA.

Dr Reddy's have plants in Shreveport and New England, and it is the first Indian company to launch the generic drug, fluoxetine with 180-market exclusivity in the US. In 2001, Reddy's completed its US initial public offering of $132.8 million, secured by American Depository Receipts and the company is also listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

The FDA issues a Form 483 letter to Dr Reddy's in December 2014 over concerns discovered during an inspection of its Srikakulam facility. No specific violations were mentioned in the letter.

CIPLA: Cipla is one of the largest pharma companies in India headquartered in Mumbai. In the US, Cipla is headquartered in Miami and has a plant in Long Island.

The company primarily develops medicines to treat cardiovascular disease, arthritis, diabetes, weight control and depression and other medical conditions. Founded by Dr. Khwaja Abdul Hamied as The Chemical, Industrial & Pharmaceutical Laboratories in 1935, the company changed shorted its name to Cipla Ltd in 1984.

USFDA approved Cipla's bulk drug manufacturing facilities in 1985 and under the leadership of founder's son Yusuf Hamied, the company became a global icon for its role in defying Western multinational pharmaceutical companies in order to provide generic drugs for AIDS and other diseases to treat poor people in the developing world.

AUROBINDO PHARMA: Aurobindo Pharma Limited was founded in 1986 and commenced operations in 1988-89 with single unit manufacturing semi-synthetic penicillin in Puducherry. The company is now headquartered in HITEC City, Hyderabad, and manufactures generic pharmaceuticals and active pharmaceutical ingredients.

The company makes tablets in its plant in New Jersey and is now gearing up for a second plant in the US after Trump called on to increase local manufacturing.

Amazon sells Hanuman leggings despite past Hindu protests on trivializing Hindu gods

NEVADA (TIP): Upset Hindus are seeking apology and urging online retailer Amazon.com for the immediate withdrawal of leggings carrying images of Hindu deity Lord Hanuman; calling it highly inappropriate. "Hanuman the Great" Women's Leggings are selling at Amazon.com for $48.00 - $58.00 and are described as: "ultimate fashion statement to express your style".

Hindus have protested and contacted Amazon.com many times in the past over what they felt was trivialization of Hindu deities on various products sold on its website and had been mostly successful in persuading the company to remove those. Hindu statesman Rajan Zed, in a statement in Nevada, said that Lord Hanuman was greatly revered in Hinduism and was meant to be worshipped in temples or home shrines and not to adorn one's legs. Inappropriate usage of Hindu deities or concepts for commercial or other agenda was not okay as it hurt the faithful.

Zed, who is President of Universal Society of Hinduism, also urged Amazon.com President Jeffrey P. Bezos to offer a formal apology, besides withdrawing Lord Hanuman leggings, as this was not the first time for the company to offer such products which were deemed offensive by Hindu devotees. Zed further said that such trivialization of Hindu deities was disturbing to the Hindu world over. Hindus were for free artistic expression and speech as much as anybody else if not more. But faith was something sacred and attempts at trivializing it hurt the devotees, Zed added. Rajan Zed suggested that Amazon.com and other companies should send their senior executives for training in religious and cultural sensitivity so that they had an understanding of the feelings of customers and communities when introducing new products or launching advertising campaigns.

Indian American Congressman's Amendment to Review Integrity of White House Security Clearances passed unanimously

WASHINGTON (TIP): Indian American Congressman Raja Krishnamoorthi of the House Oversight Committee on July 19 successfully introduced an amendment ordering a review of White House security clearance procedures by requiring the National Background Investigations Bureau to report to Congress on the process for conducting and adjudicating security clearance requests for the Executive Office of the President. The Krishnamoorthi amendment comes in the wake of Senior Advisors to the President Jared Kushner and Ivanka

The Krishnamoorthi amendment establishes the first comprehensive review of Trump White House security clearance vetting procedures

Trump, former National Security Advisor Mike Flynn, and Attorney General Jeff Sessions all omitting significant information about foreign contacts from their applications for security clearances. The measure passed the Oversight Committee by a unanimous voice vote and amended H.R.3210, a resolution regarding the national backlog of security clearance investigations. Congressman Krishnamoorthi released the following statement on the passage of his amendment: "It seems every day we learn of more undisclosed foreign contacts with senior Trump administration officials. In just the last two weeks, we have learned that Senior White House Advisor Jared Kushner failed to disclose his participation in a meeting with a Kremlin-connected Russian lawyer and her associates, including a former Soviet intelligence officer and an individual linked to a federal money laundering investigation. This is just one example of a foreign contact Mr. Kushner failed to disclose when he reportedly omitted more than one hundred from his SF-86 security clearance application. My amendment would require the Director of the National Background Investigations Bureau to report to Congress on the processes by which senior administration officials apply for and receive security clearances. Access to our nation's secrets should demand the highest levels of scrutiny and the strictest adherence to security procedure to protect against compromise by hostile foreign powers.

Mr. Kushner and other senior administration officials repeatedly failed to disclose their foreign contacts, including those with hostile powers. It is essential that we determine whether this failure puts them or our nation at risk." Krishnamoorthi represents the 8th District of Illinois and serves on Government Reform and Education and Workforce panels and also as the ranking member on the subcommittee on Health Care, Benefits, and Administrative Rules.

Indian American Congresswoman Jayapal, Congressman Cicilline Introduce Resolution of Inquiry for Release of Documents Pertaining to Possible Obstruction of Justice

WASHINGTON (TIP): After the Department of Justice released a heavily redacted, single-page document confirming that Attorney General Jeff Sessions lied to the FBI about his contacts with the Russian government, House Judiciary Committee members, Representatives Pramila Jayapal (WA-07) and David Cicilline (RI-01) introduced a resolution of inquiry requesting the Trump administration release any and all information pertaining to Attorney General Sessions' involvement in the firing of FBI director James Comey in violation of his recusal and related matters.

Jayapal and Cicilline introduced a resolution of inquiry requesting the Trump administration release any and all information pertaining to Attorney General Sessions' involvement in the firing of FBI director James Comey

"For six months, we have watched the Trump administration make a mockery of our laws and the highest office in our land while our Republican colleagues refuse to allow hearings on obstruction of justice and collusion with Russia," said Rep. Jayapal. "Our resolution of inquiry will force the House Committee on the Judiciary to consider allegations of obstruction of justice involving the Justice Department. The Senate Judiciary Committee is taking action on the matter. We need the Republicans on our committee to wake up and take these issues seriously. We have a duty as members of Congress and the Judiciary Committee to exercise oversight over the administration and the Justice Department."

"We've known for a while now that Paul Ryan and the Republicans don't want to work with us on just about anything. That's true for jobs, tax fairness, infrastructure, workforce training, and health care," said Rep. Cicilline. "But what's most outrageous is that they don't even want to work with us to make sure the American people know the truth about allegations of obstruction of justice involving the Justice Department. There is no more serious responsibility than protecting our democracy and the American people deserve members of Congress who take this responsibility seriously."

The two representatives demanded that House Republicans wake up and conduct oversight of the Trump administration. Attorney General Sessions has failed to disclose his meetings with the Russian government, largely ignored his recusal from the Russia investigation and helped to fire the FBI Director under false pretext. On July 13, the Department of Justice released a document that suggests the Attorney General failed to disclose any contacts with foreign governments on his security clearance application. The Jayapal-Cicilline Resolution is designed to obtain information about these and other systemic problems at the highest levels of the Trump administration. The Majority has refused to conduct even basic oversight of the Department of Justice. This resolution will force the issue, and leave each member to choose whether the House Judiciary Committee will begin to address these urgent problems or continue to be complicit in the administration's undermining of justice.

Jayapal and Cicilline will closely follow ongoing developments specifically pertaining to the role of Donald Trump Jr. and Jared Kushner in potential collusion between the Trump campaign and Russia. If the administration fails to be more forthcoming about these troubling developments, Jayapal and Cicilline plan to amend the resolution to demand more transparency and accountability to the American people.

SUKHPAL KHAIRA IS LEADER OF OPPN IN PUNJAB ASSEMBLY

CHANDIGARH (TIP): Bholath MLA Sukhpal Khaira was chosen as the Leader of Opposition in the Punjab Assembly today, with majority of the 19 other Aam Aadmi Party MLAs recommending his name in a one-on-one meeting with national party convener Arvind Kejriwal in New Delhi.

HS Phoolka, who had resigned as the Leader of Opposition to focus on fighting cases of the 1984 anti-Sikh riot victims, also backed Khaira.

Khaira got preference over other contenders after about 15 MLAs met in Chandigarh on July 17 where they agreed to support him on the ground that he was the only experienced legislator. One of the main contenders, Nazar Singh Mansahia, withdrew his name in Khaira's favour in the meeting itself.

Three MLAs, it is learnt, expressed strong reservation against Khaira's name today, arguing that he would nurture his personal agenda more than toeing the party's line and ideals. However, when Kejriwal and MP Bhagwant Mann announced that majority of the MLAs were in favour of Khaira, all MLAs gave their consent. The Leader of Opposition gets a Cabinet Minister rank and status. Talwandi Sabo MLA Baljinder Kaur was another contender for the post.

Party sources said the Delhi leadership felt that the party may get divided if Khaira was not given a chance. Khaira, at present the Chief Whip of the party, had openly protested against the selection of Bhagwant Mann as state party president.

Khaira faces a daunting task as he has to keep the party flag high in the Assembly, besides ensuring discipline. His first challenge would be to find a way out of privilege action against him by the Speaker. Khaira had during the Budget Session last month gone live on Facebook from the Assembly, against the rules. He was suspended for the session. A privilege committee will hear the allegation against him. Meanwhile, commenting on his election, Khaira said it was a moral victory of hard work and truth against sycophancy and money power. Khaira had remained a Congress MLA from 2007 to 2012. His father Sukhjinder Singh was an Akali leader who remained Education Minister twice.

Will decide on early hearing in Babri Masjid dispute case: SC

NEW DELHI (TIP): The Supreme Court on Friday, July 21, said it would take a decision to list for early hearing a batch of petitions challenging the Allahabad High Court verdict in the Ram Temple-Babri Masjid land dispute case.

"We will take a decision on it," a bench comprising Chief Justice JS Khehar and Justice DY Chandrachud said when BJP leader Subramanian Swamy mentioned the matter for urgent listing and hearing.

Swamy said the main appeals against the Allahabad High Court order were pending for the last seven years in the apex court and they required urgent hearing.

He also said that a separate petition had earlier been filed by him seeking enforcement of his right to worship without much hassle at the site.

He also said that he had been allowed by the apex court to intervene in the matter and is seeking expeditious disposal of the cases.

The Lucknow bench of the Allahabad High Court had in 2010 ruled a three-way division of the disputed 2.77 acres area at the disputed site in Ayodhya in Uttar Pradesh.

The three-judge bench, by a 2:1 majority, had said the land be partitioned equally among three parties, the Sunni Waqf Board, the Nirmohi Akhara and 'Ram Lalla'. Source: PTI

India-Japan civil nuclear deal finally comes into force

NEW DELHI (TIP): India completed the process of its civil nuclear agreements, as the landmark India-Japan civil nuclear agreement entered into force on Thursday, July 20.

Foreign secretary S Jaishankar and Japanese ambassador Kenji Hiramatsu exchanged diplomatic notes, marking operationalisation of the pact, the external affairs ministry said.

The civil nuclear cooperation agreement was signed last November during Prime Minister Narendra Modi's visit to Tokyo after over six years of negotiations.

The entry into force comes a few months before Shinzo Abe's scheduled visit to India in September this year. Prime Minister Modi and Abe had a meeting on the sidelines of the G20 summit in Hamburg on July 8, where they reviewed the state of bilateral relations. Abe is expected to formally begin the ground breaking for the high-speed train project to run from Ahmedabad to Mumbai.

"This agreement is a reflection of the strategic partnership between India and Japan and will pave the way for enhanced cooperation in energy security and clean energy."

"The landmark agreement seeks to promote full cooperation between the two countries in the development and uses of nuclear energy for peaceful purposes on a stable, reliable and predictable basis," external affairs ministry spokesperson Gopal Baglay told reporters.

The deal allows Japan to export nuclear technology to India, making it the first non-NPT signatory to have such a deal with Tokyo.

Pranab's farewell will span 3 days

NEW DELHI (TIP): With Ram Nath Kovind winning the presidential elections on Thursday, it is time to bid farewell to outgoing President Pranab Mukherjee, who will move out of the Rashtrapati Bhawan officially on July 25, making way for Kovind to take his place in the highest constitutional office of the country the same day.

After new President Kovind is sworn in on July 25 morning, and the Mukherjee and he have switched chairs, both of them will come down to the Central Hall of Parliament together where Kovind will make his acceptance speech. After that, accompanied by a cabinet minister Mukherjee will drive down to his new home in Lutyens' Delhi at 10, Rajaji Marg, and Kovind will head for Rashtrapati Bhawan.

There are at least three farewell gatherings planned for President Mukherjee. PM Narendra Modi will host a dinner at the Hyderabad House with his full council of ministers to bid adieu to Mukherjee.

The next day, MPs will give Mukherjee a send-off over high tea at the Central Hall, hosted by Lok Sabha Speaker Sumitra Mahajan.

Israel to partner DRDO for developing missile defence system for India

NEW DELHI (TIP): In a major upgrade to its defences, the Indian Army has signed a MoU with the Defence Research and Development Organisation (DRDO) to raise one regiment of the advanced Medium Range Surface to Air Missiles (MRSAM). The army plans to have a total of five regiments of this air defence system, which will be deployed opposite to China and Pakistan.

The MRSAM marks a paradigm shift in the capabilities of the Indian Army. The system can shoot down enemy ballistic missiles, aircraft, helicopters, drones, surveillance aircraft and Airborne Warning and Control System (AWACS) aircraft. Meant for the Army Air Defence, the MRSAM is an advanced, all weather, mobile, land-based air defence system.

It is capable of engaging multiple aerial targets at ranges of more than 50 km. Each MRSAM system comprises a command-and-control system, a tracking radar, missiles, and mobile launchers.

Each regiment consists of four launchers with three missiles each. So five regiments will have 60 missiles.

A MOU has been signed between the army and the Defence Research and Development Organisation (DRDO) for one regiment.

"The MOU marks the beginning of the development of the MRSAM in the configuration required by the army," said a defence ministry official, adding that the entire project is worth Rs 17,000 cr.

Earlier this year, the Cabinet Committee on Security headed by PM Narendra Modi approved a proposal for procuring the MRSAM system for the army. According to the proposal, the army will induct five regiments of the system.

The system will be jointly developed by Israel Aerospace Industries (IAI) and DRDO with the involvement of private sectors and DPSUs. "The system will have majority indigenous content, giving boost to the Make-in-India initiative.

The participation of Indian companies in producing MRSAM will empower them in the field of hightech weapon technology.

Last July, the IAI and DRDO conducted three flight tests of the MRSAM at the integrated test range off the Odisha Coast. The missile successfully intercepted moving aerial targets in all three tests. The MRSAM is a land-based variant of the long-range surface-to-air missile (LRSAM) or Barak-8 naval air defence system, which is designed to operate from naval vessels.

Pak targeting kids, villagers near LoC, says DGMO

NEW DELHI: India on Thursday accused Pakistan of "deliberately targeting" villages and school children in ceasefire violations across the Line of Control, which remains volatile with the two armies exchanging heavy fire on a daily basis in Jammu & Kashmir.

Indian director general of military operations Lt-General A K Bhatt told his Pakistani counterpart Major General Sahir Shamshad Mirza over the hotline to exercise "strict control" over his troops and instruct them to refrain from any "nefarious activities".

During the telephonic conversation at about 3.30pm on Thursday, Lt-Gen Bhatt said Pakistan army troops had deliberately targeted villages and also fired at school children in the Nowshera sector of Rajouri district when they were being evacuated from the area on Tuesday.

"The Pak army DGMO was told such activities did not behove any professional army. The Indian Army, as a professional force, takes due care to avoid targeting of civilians and the Pak Army was expected to do the same," said Army spokesperson Colonel Aman Anand.

ED summons Shah Rukh for FEMA violation

NEW DELHI (TIP): The Enforcement Directorate (ED) has issued notices to actor Shah Rukh Khan and his wife, Gauri Khan, for alleged violations in Foreign Exchange Management Act (FEMA) to the tune of Rs 73.6 crore and asked them to appear before it on August 23.

Actor Juhi Chawla is also being probed in this case.

SRK had appeared before the law enforcement agency in 2011 and 2015 to record his statement. The ED had sent a show-cause notice to Khan, Gauri, and Chawla in March.

What is the forex case?

- SRK formed a start-up Knight Riders Sports Pvt. Ltd (KRSPL) in 2008 to acquire IPL franchise rights of cricket team Kolkata Knight Riders. He owned 10,000 shares initially.
- The entire shareholding of KRSPL was with Red Chillies and Gauri Khan. After the success of IPL, about two crore additional shares were issued by KRSPL, of which 50 lakh shares were issued to a Mauritius-based company owned by actor Juhi Chawla's husband Jay Mehta, The Sea Island Investment Ltd (TSIIL), at Rs 10 per share, and 40 lakh shares were issued to Chawla. Khan owns 1.1 crore shares.

- Chawla later transferred her 40 lakh shares to TSIIL at Rs 10 per share as against a much higher market value. Thus, TSIIL owns 90 lakh shares at par value while the actual cost of share at the time of issue/sale was between Rs 86 and Rs 99 per share.
- The ED alleged that Khan undervalued his shares, which cost a forex loss of Rs 73.6 crore to the government.

No sympathy for lynching in the name of cow: Govt

NEW DELHI (TIP): Facing attacks over lynching incidents, the government on Thursday asserted that killings in the name of cow "sentiments" was unacceptable and said the state governments should take stern action against those indulging in such violence.

Finance minister Arun Jaitley, who was replying to a debate on lynchings in the Rajya Sabha on behalf of ailing home minister Rajnath Singh, made it clear that the central government could not be blamed for violence by "some people" as it was the responsibility of the state governments to deal with such issues. "The government's stand is clear: Nobody is allowed to do that (lynching) in the name of cow protection). There is no rationalisation, no arguments of sentiments being hurt can be an explanation for this. And, the government is absolutely committed," he said. He said "no amount of sympathy" will be shown for those who indulge in lynching and "law will certainly take its own course."

Jaitley was replying to the debate on 'situation arising out of the reported increase in the incidents of lynching.

DOKLAM CRISIS: INDIA PUSHES FOR DIALOGUE WITH CHINA

NEW DELHI (TIP): India on June 20 played cautious and maintained that talks were the way forward when it came to resolving the month-old Doklam standoff. China has maintained that Indian troops need to withdraw as a precondition for any 'meaningful dialogue' to begin.

Gopal Baglay, official spokesperson for the Ministry of External Affairs, today chose not to directly answer questions on the Chinese precondition for talks but emphasised that 'diplomatic channels' had not been impeded. India's response to the situation so far has been mellow, in contrast to the Chinese posturing which has been overly aggressive.

The spokesperson said Bhutan wants China to go back to the status quo that existed on the ground before June 16 and in essence India also wants that status quo to be restored. Speculation has been rife that differences between India and Bhutan have arisen over the Doklam crisis.

"Differences between India and China should never become a dispute...We've said diplomatic channels are available and have been available. To the best of my understanding they have never stopped," said Baglay when asked whether India will approach any international bodies such as the UN to intervene in the dispute.

Earlier in the day, External Affairs Minister Sushma Swaraj made a strong statement in the Rajya Sabha and demanded that China withdraw its troops for the talks to begin. "We are saying that if a dialogue is to be held, then both should withdraw (their troops)," she said. The Chinese action "is a challenge to our security", Swaraj said, adding that India was not doing anything unreasonable.

She added that foreign countries are with India. "They feel that China is being aggressive with a small country like Bhutan. Bhutan has protested, including in writing. All the countries feel India's stand is right and the law is with us," Swaraj added.

Mayawati's resignation accepted

NEW DELHI (TIP): BSP supremo Mayawati's resignation from the Rajya Sabha has been accepted by Chairman Hamid Ansari. Officials said Mayawati had submitted a fresh resignation letter as per the prescribed format, which was accepted by Ansari today.

Accusing the BJP and the Chair of not allowing her to raise the issue of anti-Dalit violence in Uttar Pradesh, Mayawati resigned from the House on Wednesday. The three-page resignation letter she submitted was rejected as it was not in the requisite format. As per the format, the resignation letter should be brief and should not mention reasons. The resignation move is seen as an attempt by Mayawati to consolidate her core Dalit support base and re-establish herself as the community's preeminent leader after facing a massive defeat in the UP Assembly poll earlier this year. There is also a speculation that she might tie up with Lalu Prasad Yadav's RJD to augment her falling political fortunes.

The BSP could win only 18 seats while the BJP came to power by winning more than 300 of the 403 seats in the Assembly poll. The BJP had termed her resignation as a "drama" and pointed out that her tenure in the House was anyway coming to an end early next year.

Beijing 'threatens security' at tri-junction

- In the Rajya Sabha, External Affairs Minister Sushma Swaraj said China intends to unilaterally change the status of the tri-junction with Bhutan, posing a challenge to India's security
- On the standoff at Doklam, she referred to the written agreement between India, China and Bhutan in 2012 that the three nations would together decide on the boundaries at the tri-junction point
- She said China had been constructing roads earlier too, but now they had brought in bulldozers and excavators. "We are saying that the matter can be resolved through talks, but both sides have to first take back their armies," she said

PM visited 49 countries in last 3 years: Govt

NEW DELHI (TIP): Prime Minister Narendra Modi has travelled 49 countries in the last three years during which India signed a number of agreements on a range of topics, the government today said.

In a written response to a question in the Rajya Sabha, V K

Singh, the Minister of State in the Ministry of External Affairs, said the prime minister visited eight countries in the first second half of 2014, starting with Bhutan.

This year, the prime minister has visited 10 countries in the last seven months.

GUEST COMMENT

The new President, Ram Nath Kovind

As India's 14th President, Ram Nath Kovind will be expected to play the important role of safeguarding the spirit of the Constitution and the foundations of our parliamentary democracy. Unlike his immediate predecessor Pranab Mukherjee, Mr. Kovind moves into Rashtrapati Bhavan after a stint in a Raj Bhavan. Arguably, it is a Raj Bhavan, and not the office of the Vice-President, that is the best preparatory ground for the non-ceremonial duties of the President, particularly those that may involve invoking the office's discretionary power. After general elections that produced hung Lok Sabhas, former Presidents R. Venkataraman, Shankar Dayal Sharma and K.R. Narayanan adopted different procedures to decide who would have the first shot at forming the government. Venkataraman and Sharma invited the leader of the single largest party, with varying results. While Rajiv Gandhi declined Venkataraman's invitation in 1989, A.B. Vajpayee accepted Sharma's invitation in 1996, only to see his government last no more than 13 days. In 1998, Narayanan ascertained the support Mr. Vajpayee had before calling him to form the government. Like these predecessors, Mr. Kovind may be involved in situations with no set precedent. Also, while the use and abuse of Article 356, and the imposition of President's Rule, are now monitored closely by the higher courts, as President he will necessarily have to use his own discretion should the Union Cabinet send such a recommendation. On contentious pieces of legislation, he can be extremely influential when he counsels caution, using his moral authority and the weight of his public office.

Mr. Kovind secured an impressive victory, receiving more than the number of votes pledged to him, signifying acceptance levels that go beyond the NDA's political spectrum. Once the names of the candidates for the election were known, much of the interest centered on the support he would garner from Opposition parties not affiliated to the Congress. That he did win substantially more votes vindicates the faith the BJP's leadership placed on his candidature. To the BJP's credit, it did not choose a dyed-in-saffron member of the Sangh Parivar. Mr. Kovind's candidature may have been a strategic political compromise. On the one hand, it ensured the wider support that the BJP wanted and, on the other, it wasn't entirely politically neutral, not enough anyway to allow the Congress or the Left parties the satisfaction of a consensus candidate. He is a Dalit, and his nomination was intended by the BJP to signal a socially inclusive agenda. But as President, Mr. Kovind will have to rise above political and social identities. He will be called upon to apply his mind and distinguish between settled conventions and questionable precedents in arriving at decisions. The office of the President was not conceived as merely a ceremonial post. The discretionary powers that he has demand a delicate balance without slipping into being either an unthinking rubber stamp or an overzealous interventionist. (The Hindu)

Bluster as foreign policy: Hostility has left neighbors unmoved

By Sandeep Dikshit

An unnamed US navy top brass sought to enlighten us about the end game behind the recent week-long excitement in the waters of the Bay of Bengal involving navies of the US, India and Japan. "They [China] will know that we are standing together and that it is better to stand together," he said at the end of the war-like maneuvers involving, as breathless defense correspondents put it, three aircraft carriers for the first time.

Like all naval exercises this comes with a name, this one is called the Malabar. It began in 1992 as India began reaching out to the other side of the Cold War divide and has now assumed proportions that are the interest of every sea-faring nation in the world because it involves Japan, India and the US with a very interested onlooker in Australia, all of whom disagree with Beijing's modus operandi of reworking the power equations in the region.

Astute as they are, the Chinese would have noticed that the famed US aircraft carrier Nimitz came for the exercises with a leaner complement of accompanying warships. The Japanese contributed two warships. More than war-fighting machines, they remain symbols of Shinzo Abe's overturning of Japan's post World War law forbidding its participation in international conflicts. Australia, which was kept out of the Malabar exercises, is still reorienting its navy for a blue water role.

Clearly, the comforting words of the American naval officer and the temporary presence of a number of warships in the Bay of Bengal can have no impact on the border standoff on the India-China-Bhutan tri-junction or dampen the Sino-Pakistani tango where Beijing has promised to do the heavy lifting for a massive infrastructure buildup that straddles Indian Kashmir.

Prime Minister Narendra Modi has recently jet-setted to the US, Russia, Spain, France and Germany, all with a thriving military-industrial complex. Very few have responded to his call to manufacture military hardware on Indian soil, partly because most would not wish to rework their equations with China.

The belligerent realists who have come to dominate the Indian foreign policy may draw comfort from the Donald Trump's maiden defense budget that has a few lines about India. So far India has largely bought surveillance and detection equipment from the US while going slow on offensive platforms like fighters, tanks and submarines.

Both sides have their reasons. The US had abruptly suspended the Malabar exercises after India conducted the nuclear tests in 1998. As part of US sanctions at that time, Pentagon even ordered the British to seize Indian Navy's helicopters that had come for repairs because they had American “Clearly, the comforting words of the American naval officer and the temporary presence of a number of warships in the Bay of Bengal can have no impact on the border standoff on the India-China-Bhutan tri-junction or dampen the Sino-Pakistani tango where Beijing has promised to do the heavy lifting for a massive infrastructure buildup that straddles Indian Kashmir”, says the author.

Rebonding: Joint naval exercises are symbolic of changing equations parts. India's strategic planner learnt their lessons. Just like they were left stranded after the US withdrew military assistance in 1965 (and unwittingly left a vacuum filled by the Soviet Union) after India had clashed with Pakistan, they realized military trade with the US can be halted anytime if it conflicts with American foreign objectives.

The proximity brought about by the foreign policies of successive Indian administrations has caused those apprehensions to recede. There is even talk of the US transferring its F-16 manufacturing facility to India. But the US will not easily offer any of the top-end offensive military platforms without a demonstrative expression of strategic closeness.

This could be tactical such as positioning Indian armed forces in Afghanistan. But to get into the real meat of the US arms industry, this is inadequate. Even countries in a client-patronage relationship with the US like Pakistan have been let down on crucial occasions (Kargil War) or rewarded for their occasional usefulness with a few military toys that are grossly inadequate for a full-fledged war.

The US would ideally like to sink a long strategic hook into India that makes the alliance irreversible. One element - signing of three military agreements - has been on the table since the Manmohan Singh-AK Antony era. The duo withstood immense American pressure to sign these agreements because that would have meant an irreversible entry into critical defense systems that countries with independent foreign policies try to prevent.

The Modi government has succumbed to the easiest of the three military agreements. But even its complexities have meant that the two sides could not operationalize the pact for the Malabar exercises. The signing of the other two pacts will certainly cause the Russians to turn lukewarm in supplying top-end military hardware to India.

With neither a credible sea denial strategy in hand or adequate military platforms to deter China, it was inevitable that the bluster in foreign policy would have a short shelf life. The Army Chief made a show of muscularity by dashing to Sikkim when the faceoff with the Chinese began. Three weeks later, he has reverted to expiating on Kashmir.

This approach has brought negative returns with Pakistan as well. High on Chinese backing, utility for the Arabs and Russian mending of fences, Islamabad has little appetite for dialogue on New Delhi's terms. The attempt to square Pakistan's meddling in Kashmir with reciprocal interference in Balochistan has suffered a massive blowback with the arrest of the former Indian Naval officer. Nepal too is not looking too good and India has been left with too few diplomatic tools to turn the situation around. The antipathy with China could have been best avoided when Nepal was looking to balance India's testiness with approaches to Beijing.

This cul de sac may have persuaded Foreign Secretary S Jaishankar to complain that the Dokalam military standoff between India and China has blown out of proportion due to "supra-nationalism" - beyond the authority of one national government. Apart from the usual suspects and slogans - boycott of Chinese manufactured goods, annexure of Kailash Mansarovar - the Foreign Secretary may also be hinting at the wind being provided to the sails of hyper-nationalists by foreign strategic experts with the single point agenda of showing up China poorly.

India has been hedging against Chinese dominance for nearly two decades. But its policy makers eschewed bluster towards China in favor of painstaking incremental diplomatic dexterity. The three years of belligerence may have turned the clock back.

After globalization's promise

By Pulapre
Balakrishnan

'Hyperglobalist' has been used to describe the dramatic increase in international trade witnessed for about a decade and a half from the early 1990s up to the global financial crisis of 2008. The imagery intended is one of an increasing connectedness among nations leading to a virtuous cycle of economic expansion.

By a trait common to every generation, we tend to assume that ours is somehow unique, in this case with respect to globalization. However, if we are to take the long view, we would find that this is no more than a conceit. Starting sometime in the last quarter of the 19th century, for close to 50 years, the world saw an expansion in trade that was actually as great or even greater than during the recently concluded phase. Then had also occurred an unprecedented movement of capital and of people. British capital flowed into building the railways across the world, immigrants moved from Europe to the United States and Asian labor was moved to the sites of deployment of western capital.

End of a phase

So, the facts are that the world has seen the waxing and waning of global traffic in goods, capital and people. To be precise, the phase of high trade starting 1870 came to an end with the First World War and was to revive, slowly, only after the Second. Then, following the collapse of East European communism in the early 1990s, there was a resurgence in global trade. Now even this phase has somewhat abruptly ended with the global financial crisis.

Economists who study trade flows have gone to the extent of claiming that hyperglobalisation was a one-time event unlikely to be repeated. Though some may hold that we ought to shun economists offering predictions with as much diligence as we should beware of enemies bearing gifts, it may pay us to heed their prognosis, for were it to be true, it has implications for economic possibilities in India. Note that even if vigor were to return to the global economy 25 years from now, that would still account for a significant chunk of the working life of an Indian, for which period alternative economic opportunities would have to be found.

Role of technology

What underlies the skepticism expressed regarding a revival of global trade? The view is based on the observation that especially 19th century globalization was underpinned by technological advances that facilitated trade. The advent of the telegraph is alluded to along with the invention of the internal combustion engine. The former enabled the communications infrastructure intrinsic to trade and the latter enabled the fast, reliable and cheap transportation of goods across seas. These advances, we are told, dwarf anything since, including the Internet, in terms of their capacity to expand trade. And, none is foreseen in the immediate future.

This account of how advances in technology fueled trade is of undoubted relevance but remains partial in that it leaves out the role of the growth in demand for these technologies. It was, after all, the growing market for British goods as Indian manufacturing was dislodged following military conquest and as British capital

Recognizing the diminished tempo of globalization, India's economic policymakers must address the growth of the home market, which is the demand for goods and services emanating from within the country. The immediate points of action and the appropriate instruments can be identified without much strain on our ingenuity. In the short run or the present, when the global economy is sluggish, only domestic investment can move demand", says the author.

flowed into the laying of a rail network in parts of Latin America and Africa that provided the demand for development of cheaper communication and transportation technology. Therefore, it may as well be said that trade expanded as the demand for goods grew. However, it is yet true that when global demand expands, countries can exploit the demand route to grow their economies. This was the great promise of globalization held out to the developing countries in the 1990s. Now, what does all this have to do with us in India today? A great deal, actually.

The slowdown and India

If the world economy is set to grow slowly for the foreseeable future, a premise of much of the economic policy in India since 1991 would have to be replaced. It had been assumed then that globalization was here to stay and India had only to hitch onto its current to ride to prosperity. This India has even successfully done in phases since. Now, however, we need to recognize that the game may have changed substantially - even if not irrevocably, as the experts claim. The shift that has taken place is visible most in the IT industry. Quarterly growth only inches forward there and insecurity grips its particularly young workforce. In retrospect, we can see the hollowness of the boast that had made the rounds a decade ago that India need not bother with manufacturing when it could leapfrog into a service economy led by IT exports. Now, "bricks and mortar" is no longer something to be spurned and soiling our hands may be part of the business of earning our living for some time to come.

Recognizing the diminished tempo of globalization, India's economic policymakers must address the growth of the home market, which is the demand for goods and services emanating from within the country. The immediate points of action and the appropriate instruments can be identified without much strain on our ingenuity. In the short run or the present, when the global economy is sluggish, only domestic investment can move demand.

In India, we have been witnessing slowing or depressed private investment for close to five years by now. There is a view that this has to do with tight monetary policy. It is true that the real lending rate for firms has been rising as inflation is falling. Such a policy stance can be justified only by resorting to the claim that the Reserve Bank of India knows something about future inflation that we don't, in particular that inflation is set to rise again soon. Barring this possibility, there is a case for cutting the repo rate now, and there is a clamor for this. But there are reasons to doubt the potency of such an action, one each from the supply and the demand sides. Given that they hold non-performing assets, the banks are extremely wary of lending. Any significant resumption of lending by banks may be hostage to their first resolving the bad loans problem. Ditto with the firms, which are themselves debt-laden. Are they likely to take on more of it, just because it is offered at a lower rate, before cleaning up their balance sheets?

On public investment

Independently of the 'twin balance sheet problem', Keynesian economics has long recognized that lowering the rate of interest may not do much for private investment if the expected rate of return is depressed. The slowing of both global trade and domestic manufacturing may have had precisely this effect by lowering the long-term expectations held by private investors. We do, however, know how to buoy up flagging demand. You do this through public investment. In response to the argument heard at the highest level of policymaking that there are no viable projects to be had, one need only refer to a recent news report on the state of our roads and bridges. It is reported that 23 bridges and tunnels on India's national highways are over 100 years old, of which 17 require rehabilitation or major maintenance. As many as 123 other bridges in the country require immediate attention and 6,000 are "structurally distressed". Infrastructure is unique in that spending on it raises aggregate demand and when it actually comes on stream, it raises the productivity of investment elsewhere in the economy. 'Roads and bridges' are a metaphor for the public infrastructure that the Indian economy can fruitfully absorb today. For the country's political leadership, the task is no longer to find trading partners to hug but to buckle down to the heavy lifting of expanding physical infrastructure.

MEET INDIA'S 14TH PRESIDENT

RAM NATH KOVIND'S JOURNEY FROM
MUD HOUSE TO RASHTRAPATI BHAVAN

NEW DELHI (TIP): In the fourth week of May, Ram Nath Kovind was called to New Delhi to meet Prime Minister Narendra Modi. The 71-year-old assumed that the meeting had something to do with his gubernatorial assignment in Bihar but was surprised to be told that he was one of the nine names being considered for the National Democratic Alliance's (NDA's) presidential candidate.

Unlike some of the other nominees, Kovind's name was not discussed in the media. Even his closest friends and relatives had no idea that Kovind could succeed Pranab Mukherjee as India's President, until

FORMER BIHAR GOVERNOR WINS WITH 66% VOTES, PROMISES TO WORK FOR ALL THOSE STRUGGLING TO MAKE A LIVING

Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) chief Amit Shah announced the Dalit leader's candidature following the party's parliamentary board meeting on June 19.

Kovind's ability to keep a low profile was not the only reason that Modi and Shah handpicked him. By making Kovind, a Dalit from Uttar Pradesh, the BJP-led NDA's presidential nominee, Modi and Shah took the Opposition by surprise, which was forced to recalibrate its strategy to name Congress leader Meira Kumar, daughter of Dalit icon Jagjivan Ram, as its nominee.

But the damage was already done to Opposition unity. Kovind's candidature led to a split in the Opposition, with the Nitish Kumar-led Janata Dal (United), Naveen Patnaik's Biju Janata Dal, and several other regional parties announcing they would vote for the NDA candidate.

If the move caused hiccups in the JD (U)-Rashtriya Janata Dal and Congress 'grand alliance' in Bihar, it also contributed to Bahujan Samaj Party chief Mayawati quitting her Rajya Sabha membership. Ever since performing miserably in the Uttar Pradesh Assembly polls, Mayawati has been in search for a cause that could help her reclaim her party's Dalit support base. The choice of Kovind has strengthened BJP's newfound support among non-Jatav Dalits.

On Thursday, July 20, the result after the counting of votes was on expected lines. Kovind received 65.65 per cent of the electoral college votes. Congress leaders claimed Kumar's were the second-highest number of votes that a runner-up had ever received in the 13 previous presidential elections. But there was some embarrassment for the Congress, with some of its legislators in Gujarat having voted not for Kumar but Kovind. There were instances of cross-voting in favour of Kovind in some other states, too.

Kovind would take the oath of office on July 25. He is only the second Dalit, after KR Narayanan (1997-2002), who would become India's head of state.

After the result's announcement, an emotional Kovind reminisced about his journey from a mud-walled house in Paraunkh, his ancestral village in Kanpur Dehat, to become the 14th President of India.

He said he never aspired to be the president, and that "tireless service" to his society and country had brought him to this position.

The President-elect said: "It is raining a lot in Delhi today and it reminds me of days when I would stay in my paternal village. It was a 'kachcha' home of mud walls. The straw roof would not be able to stop water during rains. We all brothers and sisters would huddle around a wall, waiting for the rains to stop.

"There would be so many Ram Nath Kovinds in the country today, getting drenched in rains, doing farm work, labour and sweating it out so that they can get their evening meals. I want to tell them that this Ram Nath Kovind of Paraunkh village is going to Rashtrapati Bhavan as their representative."

With Kovind's election, and M Venkaiah Naidu set to be the vice-president, it will be for the first time in 70 years that the two constitutional heads as well as the head of government, the prime minister, will be associated with the Rashtriya Swayamsevak Sangh (RSS). Months before the Bihar Assembly polls in October 2015, Kovind was made the Bihar governor. He has been a lawyer and associated with RSS' Dalit outreach for over 40 years. He has also served as a member on the board of management of Ambedkar University, Lucknow, and was a member of the board of governors of the Indian Institute of Management, Kolkata.

Kovind is married and has a son and a daughter. His wife, Savita, had accompanied him during his election-related campaign across India over the past one month.

Pakistan SC warns Sharif's children of 7-yr jail if papers found forged

ISLAMABAD (TIP): The children of Pakistan Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif could face up to seven years in jail if it was proved that they had submitted fake documents to the Panama panel probing the money laundering allegations against the family, the Supreme Court warned on July 20.

The apex court heard the Panamagate scandal case for the fourth consecutive day since the hearing began on Monday, following submission of a report by the Joint Investigation Team (JIT) on July 10, which was tasked by the court to probe allegation of corruption against Sharif and his family.

"The punishment for submitting forged documents in the court is seven years in jail," warned the three-member panel of judges.

The JIT among other things has observed that some of the documents submitted by the children of Sharif, 67, were tampered with.

A trust deed provided by the prime minister's daughter Maryam Nawaz and executed in 2006 was written in Calibri font which was not commercially available till 2007. It was also notarised from an office in London on Saturday which is officially an off day, raising concern about the authenticity of the document.

Similarly, Government of Dubai has revealed that the documents of Gulf Steel Mills provided by the prime minister's son Hussain Nawaz were forged as there was no record of those documents.

Justice Ejaz Afzal is heading the probe panel comprising Justice Sheikh Azmat Saeed and Justice Ijazul Ahsan.

They also warned Salman Akram Raja, the lawyer of Sharif's children, against a media trial in the case after some of the documents presented by him were leaked to media and were discussed in talk shows yesterday.

"You have been conducting a trial in the media and the documents (submitted to the court) have already been discussed in the media," said Justice Saeed.

"There is a media dais outside, you should give your arguments there as well," he told Raja, who assured the court that he had not released any documents to media.

Meanwhile, Raja presented his arguments in details. The arguments were still going on when the court adjourned the proceedings till tomorrow.

The judges today again asked the Sharif family to provide the money trail of its various businesses in the UAE, Saudi Arabia, Qatar and the UK.

"The main question is where did the money for these businesses come," asked the panel.

Later, Fawad Chaudhry, member of a legal team representing Imran Khan of Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI), told media outside the court after the hearing that the hearing might be completed by tomorrow.

"For us the case is over. Sharif would have to go home and then jail for corruption. His children would also land in jail for forgery," he said.

Minister of State for Information Marriyam Aurangzeb said that the prime minister has been vindicated as there is no proof of any corruption against him.

"The prime minister was accused of money laundering and corruption but none of the allegations have been proved," she said.

The scandal surfaced when the Panama Papers leaks last year revealed that Sharif's sons -- Hassan Nawaz and Hussain Nawaz -- and his daughter Maryam -- owned offshore companies which managed their family's properties. The assets in question include four expensive flats in Park Lane, London.

Opposition parties allege that the London flats were purchased through illegal money which Sharif and his family have rejected. However, they have been unable to satisfy the court about the source of money used to purchase these properties.(PTI)

Pakistan man thanks India for son's successful cardiac surgery

HYDERABAD (TIP): Lahore-bound 34-year-old Kamal Siddiqui is getting home but with good memories, flooded by the generosity and kindness of the Indian people. His infant son Rohaan underwent a complex heart surgery in India, thanks to external affairs minister Sushma Swaraj, who heard his plea and granted a visa to the Pakistan family to visit India for treatment.

"My experience in India has been very nice. The reception we got was more warm than expected," Kamal Siddiqui told TOI. "Rohaan is fine," he said after the infant got operated upon at a hospital at Noida.

In May this year, Kamal Siddiqui had made a fervent plea to the minister to grant his family a visa so that his son Rohaan could be brought for medical treatment to India. Sushma responded to Siddiqui and a visa was granted to the family.

On July 21, Rohaan underwent a successful cardiac surgery. "Today Rohaan underwent a complex but successful cardiac surgery. Thankful to Jaypee Hospital and people of India for their support and care," Kamal had said.

"Had a great day today. Rohaan was discharged from hospital," Siddiqui said on Tuesday thanking Sushma Swaraj, Dr Rajesh and Jaypee. "Thank you India. God bless all," he added. (PTI)

Myanmar insists no North Korea links as US envoy visits

YANGON (TIP): Myanmar has no military ties with North Korea, a Myanmar official said on July 17, as a US diplomat responsible for North Korea arrived for talks in which he is likely to seek assurances on efforts to isolate it.

Ambassador Joseph Yun was set to meet Myanmar's State Counsellor Aung San Suu Kyi and the military's commander in chief in the capital, Naypyitaw, on Monday, according to the U.S. Embassy in Yangon.

Yun attended a conference in Singapore over the weekend focusing on tension on the Korean peninsula over the North's unrelenting nuclear and missile programmes.

Ambassador Joseph Yun's trip to Asia was announced after North Korea's test on July 4 of an intercontinental ballistic missile that it says can carry a large nuclear warhead and some experts believe has the range to reach Alaska.

Myanmar is the only other stop on his trip, pointing to concern in Washington that Myanmar's army, which used to have ties with North Korea, continues to give succour to Kim Jong Il's regime.

The United States did not inform Myanmar what Yun would discuss, said Kyaw Zeya, permanent secretary at Myanmar's Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

"They are not very specific from the very beginning but we understand he is the special envoy on North Korea," Kyaw Zeya told Reuters.

Myanmar was complying with UN resolutions on North Korea, he said.

"It's normal relations between the two countries," said Kyaw Zeya. "As I understand, there's no such relations between military to military. Definitely not."

The United States in May asked Southeast Asian countries to do more to isolate North Korea, and efforts have increased after its July 4 ballistic missile test.

RESIDUAL POCKETS?: Myanmar's former ruling junta, which, like North Korea, was also widely shunned by the outside world over its suppression of human rights, was known to have ties to North Korea, which included sending missile experts and material for arms production to Myanmar.

Myanmar insists that arms deals and other military relations with North Korea stopped before its transition to a nominally civilian government in 2011.

Nobel laureate Suu Kyi took power last year amid a transition from full military rule. But the military could still have "a few residual pockets" with links to North Korea, the then top U.S. diplomat for East Asia, Daniel Russel, told a congressional hearing in September.

In March, the US Treasury levelled new sanctions against the Myanmar army's procurement body, the Directorate of Defence Industries (DDI), under the Iran, North Korea, and Syria Nonproliferation Act Sanctions.

The DDI was previously sanctioned in 2012 and accused of materially assisting North Korea's regime, but had fallen off the sanctions list in October after the Obama administration dropped most measures against Myanmar in recognition of a successful political transition.

But despite Suu Kyi leading the civilian administration, Myanmar's military remains free from civilian oversight.

A 2008 constitution drafted by then-ruling generals keeps the army central to politics. (Reuters)

Convictions in major Thai human trafficking trial

BANGKOK (TIP): A Thai court found dozens of people guilty of human trafficking offences today in a mass trial exploring links between corrupt officials, including a senior army general, and the grim but lucrative trade in Rohingya and Bangladeshi migrants.

Thailand's junta launched a crackdown in May 2015 on a network funnelling desperate migrants through southern Thailand and onto Malaysia, holding some for ransom in jungle camps.

It unspooled a crisis across Southeast Asia as gangmasters abandoned their human cargo in the camps where hundreds died from starvation and malaria, and at sea in overcrowded boats which were then "ping ponged" between Thai, Malaysian and Indonesian waters.

Rights groups long accused officials of ignoring - and even orchestrating - the trade in humans through Thailand's southern provinces. The area was the crucial link in a criminal trail that stretched from Myanmar to Malaysia.

The crackdown revealed a lattice of military, police, local political and mafia figures acting as traffickers, agents and logistics men, all soaking up cash from some of Asia's poorest and most vulnerable migrants.

On Wednesday judges at Bangkok Criminal Court began delivering a stream of verdicts for the 102 defendants. One other accused died while on remand.

The offences include human trafficking, ransom and murder. All deny the charges.

Media were barred from the court itself, relying instead on an audio relay of the complex proceedings.

Judges placed heavy reporting restrictions on much of the testimony, citing national security concerns. But the case has still lifted the lid on the power networks dominating southern Thailand.

Army Lieutenant-General Manas Kongpan, a top figure in the security apparatus covering the south, is the highest-ranking official on trial.

In 2013 he was promoted to head the Internal Security Command (ISOC) for the south. Current junta leader Prayut Chan-O-Cha was army chief at the time.

Another well-connected alleged kingpin is Pajjaban Aungkachotephan, better known as Ko Tong or 'Big Brother Tong'. Police accused him of using private Andaman Sea islands, close to tourist spots such as Koh Lipe, to shift boatloads of migrants to the mainland, where they were packed into lorries and taken to the fetid camps straddling the Malaysia border.

An army captain, four ranking police officers, a nurse and several officials, including the mayor of Pedang Besar in Satun province, are also among the accused.

By the lunch break a drip feed of 38 defendants had been convicted for a range of offences including human trafficking and slavery. Among them were guards at the jungle camps where migrants were held, including a Rohingya man who acted as an interpreter, and a string of local officials. (AFP)

DEEPIKA PADUKONE: HONOURED TO BE A NEW ACADEMY MEMBER

Deepika Padukone is one of the newest members the Academy of Motion Picture of Arts & Sciences (AMPAS) and the actress says she feels honoured to be included in the Class of 2017.

The 31-year-old actress, who made her Hollywood debut with Vin Diesel's "xXx: Return of Xander Cage", took to Twitter to share her excitement.

"Honoured to be a new #Academymember. @TheAcademy #Classof2017," Deepika tweeted.

Following two years of sharp criticism and back-to-back ceremonies with an all-white slate of acting nominees, AMPAS last month invited a record 774 new members from 57 countries around the world to join the organisation's ranks. Apart from Deepika, Priyanka Chopra has also joined the Academy Class of 2017.

THERE'S OBSESSION FOR FEMALE'S BODY EVERYWHERE: TAAPSEE

Actress Taapsee Pannu, who has apologised for her comment on southern cinema's midriff craze, says the obsession for a female body exists everywhere. The actress, who made a strong statement about how a woman's "no means no" with the hard-hitting drama 'Pink', was trolled after she featured in a comic video wherein she spoke about how in her debut Telugu movie 'Jhummandi Naadam' (2010) director K. Raghavendra Rao had a coconut thrown at her navel to add "sensuality".

It's a sequence oft repeated in the filmmaker's films - but there are usually flowers or fruits instead of a coconut. "There's an obsession for a female's body everywhere. Do I need to name some songs in Bollywood that have some weird obsessions? It's not just there (in the southern film industry)," Taapsee said in an interview.

"I was just sharing my experience because I have seen that in south, and that glamour bit has not happened with me in Bollywood yet," added the actress, who has featured in films like 'Baby' and 'Naam Shabana', apart from 'Pink' - all of which saw her portray intense characters.

Taapsee says that her comment in the video was "misconstrued" by the media which led to it being blown out of proportion. She apologised nevertheless because she wanted "peace". She says it has become hard for celebrities to express their views "as some part of the media has become trolls".

"People thought I was trying to humiliate the director who launched me, which obviously was not the case. I am not that stupid. I always give credit to him (for my career) and have always said that he is a man with the Midas Touch."

"He is known to launch very big stars. Why will I go and be hurtful or disrespectful towards him? Some people just don't know how to interpret what one says and they manage to see the glass half empty." It's because she "can't stand so much hatred" that she then decided to issue an apology.

"It's like you step on someone accidentally, and you apologise for it even when it wasn't intentional." Yet, Taapsee enjoys the social media platform as it gives her accessibility to her fans.

LIPSTICK UNDER MY BURKHA

CAST: Konkona Sensharma, Ratna Pathak Shah, Aahana Kumra, Plabita Borthakur

DIRECTION: Alankrita Shrivastava

GENRE: Comedy

DURATION: 1 hour 58 minutes

STORY

Four ordinary women, inflicted by silly societal norms, have to steal, lie, cheat and hide in order to lead the lives that they rightfully deserve.

REVIEW

In the final moments of Lipstick Under My Burkha, as the four protagonists face the explosive consequences of their perceived rebellions, we hear firecrackers bursting in the background. Director Alankrita Shrivastava uses the backdrop of Diwali to tell us that the lives of these women may be going up in flames, but they'll go out with a bang.

It is with this skilled assuredness that she tells the stories of her heroines: Shireen (Konkona) is bogged down by a chauvinistic husband who only wants to hump her mechanically, but she finds her release in her day job; Leela (Aahana) uses sex to live out her fantasies and manipulates her men; Rihana (Plabita) is cloaked in her burkha, but dreams of ripped jeans, bad boys and Miley Cyrus's brand of liberation and Usha (Ratna) has been deemed asexual owing to her age, but hides erotic books in religious tomes — both ushering her to (different types of) climaxes in her life.

What is so scandalous (or "lady-oriented") about the lives of these women, is unclear. In fact, Shrivastava's bravest act is simply opening the doors and showing us what goes on behind them. Behind the closed doors of a conservative Muslim girl's room, where she dances sans music to let out the rage; behind the closed doors of a couple's bedroom, where the woman is supposed to be a latent victim to her husband's libido; behind the closed doors of a girl's beauty salon, where intimate advice is doled out as smoothly as the underarm hair is waxed off and behind the closed doors of an older woman's bathroom where she runs a tap to muffle the moans of her desires.

The women portraying these lives on screen give Lipstick... its true color. Plabita and Aahana are instantly relatable and light up the screen. Konkona's helplessness makes you think about every woman who is a second-class citizen in her own home. And Ratna's infatuated Usha, a woman in the throes of passion, will make you look at older women in a new light.

ASHLEY GREENE: I AM PROBABLY THE MOST UNTRADITIONAL BRIDE

Actress Ashley Greene said she would be the most unconventional newly-wed as she is not someone who is stressing about her wedding plans. The 30-year-old actress, who is enjoying her courtship period with fiancé, Paul Khoury, said she is in no rush to get hitched.

"I'm probably the most untraditional bride. We're at the age where a lot of our friends are getting married, and many of them are stressed out."

"That's just not how I want to enter into our union. So, for us, we're enjoying the honeymoon engagement stage," Greene said. The 'Burying the Ex' actress got engaged to Khoury in December 2016.

LYNDA CARTER IN TALKS TO APPEAR IN 'WONDER WOMAN' SEQUEL

Actress Lynda Carter, who played the original Wonder Woman in the 1970s show, is in talks for a role in the new 'Wonder Woman' film franchise.

"We were trying to get me in the first one and we couldn't make it work with our timing," Carter said.

The actress states that she has already discussed a possible appearance in 'Wonder Woman 2' with director Patty Jenkins. "It really is up to Patty, and if it works in an organic way it'll be great fun and it'll be wonderful to do," said the actress, who is currently starring in 'Supergirl'.

She added, "Am I open to it? Absolutely. I adore Patty Jenkins, and it'll be wonderful to do. But we'll just see how that goes." Carter then praised actress Gal Gadot and Jenkins following the success of the new 'Wonder Woman' film.

"I was so taken with the both of them, and taken with Patty from the beginning when she very first got this film, and we talked on the phone," she said. "I just said that she knows who this character is. Because Wonder Woman - it's the idea of her," the actress continued.

DUNKIRK

CAST: Fionn Whitehead, Harry Styles, Tom Glynn-Carney, Jack Lowden, Aneurin Barnard, James D'Arcy, Kenneth Branagh, Cillian Murphy, Mark Rylance, Tom Hardy

DIRECTION: Christopher Nolan

GENRE: History

DURATION: 1 hour 46 minutes

STORY

'Dunkirk' is a World War II film by Christopher Nolan which depicts the story of a French beach and harbour where allied soldiers were caught in a fierce battle, with nowhere to escape.

REVIEW

Christopher Nolan is a director who puts a lot of thought into writing and directing his films. He's a visual storyteller who cares dearly about the narrative structure he painstakingly arranges on the screen while treating his audience with substantial intelligence. For years, he's broken new ground in cinema by tackling complex concepts with multiple layers that unravel with repeat viewings. So it shouldn't come as a surprise that 'Dunkirk' is another Nolan film that will reveal new aspects a second or even third time around.

At the outset, this story is relatively straightforward – almost 4 lakh allied soldiers are stranded on a beach, surrounded by land and being picked off slowly by air bombers. They need to be evacuated by sea, but there aren't many ships to ferry them off. It's an absolutely harrowing predicament to be in, and Nolan captures the fear, anxiety, strength and bravery of those involved in equal measure. He does not politicise or glorify the notion of war, instead choosing to portray it for what it is – a complex game of survival, with little room for heroics. What's astounding is his ability to do so with minimal dialogue. Arguably, any of the actors could be easily replaced and the movie wouldn't be hampered. Each soldier, officer, pilot, general and captain has his own significant role to play but in the absence of emotional pandering, the entire event itself turns into the lead character.

His decision to completely abstain from CGI, and opting for practical effects instead, makes every gunshot, explosion and dogfight feel extremely real and potent. This is further accentuated by an unnerving musical score by Hans Zimmer that only adds to the nonstop tension. These elements combine to make 'Dunkirk' a purely visceral experience, especially in IMAX. While it is not for the average moviegoer – if you're looking for a fun and mindless action flick there are other options around – it is the first real contender for 'Best Picture', and a number of other technical awards. If nothing else, it is yet another landmark achievement by one of the most important and skilled storytellers in the present generation of filmmaking.

Earthquake damages buildings on Greek island; 2 killed, 100 hurt

KOS (TIP): A powerful earthquake struck Greek islands early morning on July 20, damaging buildings and a port, killing at least two people and causing more than 100 injuries, authorities said.

The island of Kos was nearest to the epicentre and appeared to be the worst-hit, with two deaths and structural damage to older buildings. Minor damage — cracks in buildings, smashed windows and trashed shops — appeared widespread, according to city officials.

"The rest of the island has no problem. It's only the main town that has a problem," Kos Mayor Giorgos Kyritsis told state-run Greek media. "The buildings affected were mostly old, and were built before the earthquake building codes were introduced."

Rescuers were checking for trapped people inside houses after the quake struck in the middle of the night. Kyritsis said the army was mobilised along with emergency services. The island's port was among structures that sustained damaged and a ferry en route there was not docking, the coast guard said. Giorgos Halkidios, Kos regional government official, said the number of injured was more than 100.

"Two or three of them are in serious condition and are in surgery," he said. He said the injured included people who were underneath a building that collapsed. Ferry services were suspended due to damage at Kos's main port, where a 14th-century fortress also was damaged. A minaret from an old mosque also was damaged.

Greek officials said the quake was 6.5-magnitude. It was centred 10 kilometres south of Bodrum, Turkey, and 16 kilometres east-northeast of Kos with a depth of 10 kilometres, according to the US Geological Survey. According to Turkish disaster officials, the earthquake had a magnitude of 6.3, and more than 20 aftershocks have been recorded.

Esengul Civelek, governor of Mugla province, said there were no casualties according to initial assessments. She said "there were minor injuries due to fear and panic." In Bitez, a resort town about 6 kilometres west of Bodrum, the quake sent frightened residents running into the streets.

Hotel guests briefly returned to their rooms to pick up their belongings but chose to spend the rest of the night outside, with some using sheets and cushions borrowed from nearby lounge chairs to build makeshift beds, according to an AP reporter on the scene. Greece and Turkey lie in an especially earthquake-prone zone. (AP)

Swiss identify glacier bodies as couple missing since 1942

BERLIN (TIP): Swiss police say they've formally identified two bodies found on an Alpine glacier as those of a couple missing for nearly 75 years. Valais canton (state) police said Wednesday that forensic experts using DNA analysis identified the two as Marcelin Dumoulin and his wife, Francine. They were 40 and 37, respectively, when they disappeared on Aug. 15, 1942. The couple's daughter, now 79, has said her parents set off on foot to feed their animals but never returned. Police were alerted on Friday to the bodies on the Tsanfleuron glacier at 2,615 meters (8,580 feet) above sea level. Regional police have a list going back to 1925 of missing people. They note that, because of climate change, bodies of people missing for decades regularly emerge from receding glaciers. (PTI)

20 Yemeni civilians killed in air strike: UN, witnesses

ADEN (TIP): An air strike on a group of displaced Yemenis has killed at least 20 civilians, mostly from the same family, a UN statement and witnesses said July 19. The attack on Tuesday afternoon hit a group of civilians in the Mawza district of the southwestern province of Taz, a statement by the UN refugee agency said. Residents said the attack was carried out by a warplane from the Saudi-led coalition fighting Shiite rebels in support of Yemen's internationally recognised government.

Clashes between herdsmen, farmers kill 33 in Nigeria

KANO, NIGERIA (TIP): At least 33 people were killed in clashes between cattle herders and farmers in Nigeria's northern Kaduna state, a police chief told AFP Thursday. KANO, Nigeria: At least 33 people were killed in clashes between cattle herders and farmers in Nigeria's northern Kaduna state, a police chief told AFP on July 20.

Water thrown at Muslim women in 'fake acid attack hate crime' outside mosque

SOUTHAMPTON (TIP): Water was thrown over two women standing outside a mosque in an apparent fake acid attack which police are treating as racially aggravated assault.

The women, who were wearing traditional head coverings, were attacked as they waited outside the Bashir Ahmed Masjid in Southampton on Tuesday. A CCTV footage showed a black car slowing down next to them before speeding away. The pair reacted in horror before realising they are unhurt.

The mosque, in the southern city's Portswood district, has been forced to issue a safety warning to worshippers.

Police described the women as "understandably shaken", while on Facebook the mosque shared their fears that a subsequent attack could involve acid. It follows a string of acid attacks, including five committed inside 90 minutes in London last week.

A message, the mosque said, came from one of the women read, "Sisters just to warn you to be careful when you are out and about, you all know about the recent acid attacks in London."

"Today my friend and I were standing outside Bashir Masjid in Portswood, waiting to be picked up when a group of men in a black car drove past us and threw water at us. We are both OK because it was only water, but if they get away with doing stuff like this then it could embolden them to next time use bleach or acid."

The footage suggested the assault took place at about 2pm.

A Hampshire Constabulary spokeswoman said, "We received a report yesterday regarding a racially aggravated assault in Portswood Road, Southampton."

"A woman reported that she stood outside a mosque in Portswood Road, with her friend, when they had water thrown over them by someone in a passing car."

"Our investigations are continuing today and we are in contact with the victims who were understandably shaken by this incident. The vehicle is described as a black estate car."

Recent acid attacks have led to calls for tougher controls on corrosive substances, while Home Secretary Amber Rudd has suggested acid attack convictions could soon carry life sentences. A Home Office review will examine the law enforcement and criminal justice response, existing laws, access to harmful products and the support available for victims.

Anyone with information about the Southampton assault should call Hampshire Constabulary on 101, and quote reference 44170276157. (PTI)

Gifts to Britain's Queen Elizabeth II go on display

LONDON (TIP): Britain's Queen Elizabeth II is putting gifts received from world leaders on display at Buckingham Palace, with the eclectic collection including presents from the likes of Nelson Mandela and John F. Kennedy.

A remarkable array of over 200 gifts will go on display from Saturday, providing an intriguing reminder of the globetrotting lifestyle and international encounters of the 91-year-old sovereign.

"One of the most universal aspects of the Queen's meetings with other heads of state, both at home and abroad, is the exchange of gifts," said Sally Goodsir, assistant curator of the new "Royal Gifts" exhibition.

Since her accession to the throne in 1952, Elizabeth has travelled more than 1 million miles (1.6 million kilometres) around the world and taken part in 89 state visits abroad.

At the same time, she has welcomed more than 100 leaders to Britain for formal state visits.

"The exchange is a gesture of goodwill and these gifts are representative of traditional skills or of cultural significance and speak of a nation of culture's history and traditions," explains Goodsir.

Although hugely diverse, these symbols of friendship have often involved an exchange of signed photographs.

These include one from US President John F. Kennedy in 1961, who along with his wife Jackie was invited to dine at Buckingham Palace while on an unofficial visit to London.

The gifts on display also include a handwritten note of Kennedy's "high esteem" for his royal host.

Thirty-five years later, the queen met with another great figure of the 20th century when she welcomed Nelson Mandela for a state visit. The then South African president offered the monarch a silk scarf depicting bushmen hunting a herd of eland in his country's Eastern Cape region.

Next to the scarf stands a surprising portrait of Elizabeth, created by weaving dyed banana leaves together, which was given by Rwanda's president Paul Kagame in 2006.

Below the majestic chandeliers of Buckingham Palace's ballroom gifts from Asia are on display, including a lacquer box with the image of a heron worked in silver on the lid.

It was a present from Japan's Emperor Showa to Elizabeth for her coronation in 1953. (AP)

PLACES TO VISIT IN KUTCH FOR A COMPLETE VACATION

The district of Kutch in Gujarat is a prime tourist destination not only in western India but also the nation as a whole. The Gulf of Kutch and the Arabian Sea borders it in south and west parts; whereas northern and eastern parts are covered by the Great and Little Rann. Kutch is a border area and naturally it has an army and air force base camp. Bhuj is the most important city here and the Bhuj Airport connects Kutch to the rest of the country on the aerial route. The presence of many unique places to visit in Kutch makes it a tourist hub. Kutch sightseeing include destinations from deserts to urban area, from pre historic excavation sites to wildlife havens.

The Rann of Kutch

The Rann of Kutch is arguably the best known and most popular tourist attraction in the region. The word rann means desert in Hindi and this place is a different sort of desert. Divided into two parts, the Rann of Kutch is a magical place made of salt marshes which looks like a page out of a fairy tale on a moonlit night. The Great Rann covers an area of 7,850 sq kms and the Little Rann is spread across 4,950 sq kms. You have to be here to understand the real essence of this place.

When in Kutch make sure you pay a visit to Bhuj, often referred to as the Jaisalmer of Gujarat. A very important city in the Kutch region, Bhuj came to national interest in 2001 when a massive earthquake hit the area. The city happened to be the past capital of the former princely state of Kutch. Named after the Bhujiyo Dungar hillock, Bhuj is a maze of alleys. The houses and temples here bear true testimony to the mastery of past artisans of Gujarat. When in Bhuj, make sure that you visit places like Aina Mahal, bell tower in Prag Mahal and the Kutch museum.

Narayan Sarovar

Located in Bhuj, Narayan Sarovar is a very important place for Hindus. Five holy lakes of Hinduism namely Man Sarovar, Pampa Sarovar, Bindu Sarovar, Narayan Sarovar and Pushkar Sarovar have their presence here.

Are you into past civilisation and their lost glory? If yes, then Dholavira is your destination! Located in the Khadir Bet Island in Kutch, Dholavira is home to one of the largest excavation sites of the Indus Valley Civilization. Also known as 'Kotada timba', Dholavira has been a favourite of Archaeological Survey of India thanks to the discovery of the remains of the Indus valley civilization. Going by expert observation, it is assumed that this place is in existence from around 2650 BC to 1450 BC!

Desert Wildlife Sanctuary

Kutch Desert Wildlife Sanctuary is a massive wilderness spread over a land area of 7505 sq kms. Often referred to as one of the largest seasonal saline wetland areas of the country, Kutch Desert Wildlife Sanctuary is home to many rare species. Greater flamingo, Indian porcupine, spiny tailed lizard, black-necked storks, wild ass and Indian cormorant are some of the easily spotted animals in this sanctuary. The winters are considered to be the best time to visit this place.

Situated 60 kms away from Bhuj, Mandvi is another important place to visit in Kutch region. Essentially a fortified town, Mandvi is known for its beaches. Apart from this, people can also visit the Vijay Vilas Palace. Built in 1940, this stunning mansion is a must visit in Mandvi.

Aina Mahal

Maharao Lakhpatji's old palace, built in traditional Kutchi style, is in a small fortified courtyard in the old part of the city. It's a beautifully presented museum and is one of the highlights of a visit to Bhuj. The entrance to the palace houses the tourist office, and this is also the site of the Maharao Madansinhji Museum, which has a varied collection of paintings, photos and embroideries. There's a 15m long scroll depicting the Royal Procession of Maharao Shri Pragmalji Bahadur (1838-75). Check out the expression on the last blue-turbaned figure in this epic painting he looks quite peeved at having to ignobly bring up the up the of the procession!

The real attraction here, though, is the Hall of Mirrors, created by the master artisan, Ram Singh Malam, under the patronage of his poet-ruler, Maharao Shri Lakhpatji around the middle of the 18th century. A blend of Indian and European artistry (Ram Singh acquired, his skills in Europe), the walls of the great hall are of white marble covered by mirrors separated by gilded ornaments, lighting being provided by elaborate candelabra, with shades of Venetian glass.

Another remarkable feature is the pleasure pool, in the middle of which rises a square platform where the maharao composed his poems and gave encouragement to the classical arts of dancing girls, bards and musicians.

Banni Grasslands Reserve

Banni Grasslands Reserve or Banni grasslands form a belt of arid grassland ecosystem on the outer southern edge of the desert of the marshy salt flats of Rann of Kutch in Kutch District, Gujarat State, India. They are known for rich wildlife and biodiversity and are spread across an area of 3,847 square kilometers. They are currently legally protected under the status as a Protected or Reserve Forest in India.

The word 'Banni' comes from Hindi and Sanskrit word 'banai', meaning made. The grasslands are home to mammals such as the Nilgai, Chinkara, Blackbuck, Wild boar, Golden Jackal, Indian Hare, Indian Wolf, Caracal, Asiatic Wildcat and Desert Fox etc. among others. This grassland reserve as one of the last remaining habitats of the Cheetah (Yiger) in India.

DO MEN NOT LIKE FUNNY WOMEN?

Now, I haven't dated in a while (being married slows you down), but back in my dating days — when a meet cute could be arranged without a right swipe — I was the funny woman. Quips, wit, sarcasm, jokes were my break-the-ice MO. Come to think of it, my dating book was as empty as our collective wallets after the DeMo drive and the wait for the follow-up call was just as long as the lines. What may explain the date drought is the fact — that I didn't know then — is that "women want men who can make them laugh, and men want women who they can make laugh."

A CONDITIONED RESPONSE

'Balderdash' is how life coach and relationship expert Aditi Mirchandani would categorise the 'men don't like funny women' stereotype. "Traditionally, humour is not something women were necessarily valued for in society. This reflected in the relationship realm. Men were conditioned with 'hassi toh phassi' and many women were conditioned with 'you must laugh at his jokes'," she says. But millennials are changing the rules.

The role of humour has increased in the dating world. "With fast-paced stress-filled lives, couples today see the value of sitting down at the end of the day and laughing with their mate. It makes for exciting and fun-filled partnerships," she adds. Writer Anuja Chauhan says, "Bantering, humour, kidding-back-and-forth is a lovely dynamic. In a romantic situation, an intelligent man will quickly get bored if a beautiful woman just simpers."

Even relationship researchers concur. US-based relationship expert John Gottman found when humour plays a role in diffusing tension and conflict, marriages last longer. Additional studies show that people who joke with their spouses in everyday situations tend to be happy in their marriage.

PLIGHT OF FUNNY WOMEN

Humour in women though is grossly underrated, under-represented and under-researched. A German study found that when male and female strangers engaged in natural conversation, the degree to which a woman laughed while talking to a man was indicative of her interest in dating him. How much the woman laughed also predicted the man's desire to date her. On the flip side, how often a man laughed was unrelated to his interest in a woman.

In a contentious Christopher Hitchens' Vanity Fair article titled "Why Women aren't funny?", American author Fran Lebowitz said: "The cultural values [for humour] are male; for a woman to say a man is funny is the equivalent of a man saying that a woman is pretty. Also, humour is largely aggressive and pre-emptive, and what's more male than that?"

Comedienne Neeti Palta agrees. For a successful show, she knows that she needs to be the alpha in the room. But even after years in comedy, the first feedback she gets are about looks, clothes, being bold, and finally, funny. "Funny women do tend to get friendzoned a lot more." Palta adds that a lot of humour is about laughing at the women more than with them: "Tun Tun, desperate girlfriends, comedy shows where men cross dress all come to mind," she says.

A 2015 study found that women whose partners have a great sense of humour also have more orgasms (Source: Psychology Today). If a man can make a woman laugh, it adds to his sense of self.

Writer Yashodhara Lal mentions reading a phrase somewhere: "she was well-versed at the art of acting helpless when there are helpful people around". That jolted her out of playing the "female card" in life. "If you're acting helpless and playing games, you're hiding many of your best qualities including your awesome sense of humour," she says. Source: TOI

MANICURE MISTAKES YOU'RE MAKING

Nothing ruins a day more than a chipped manicure or a broken nail. Women are out to conquer the world, then why let this minor bump in the road stop you for looking bomb all day long. To save you time we have rounded up six manicure sins you're making. So stop cursing the nail paint! Instead, ask yourself if you committed any of these sins. If you nod your head at any point on this list, then you have your answer.

Don't apply too many coats

Applying thick coats of nail paint gets you one step closer to ruining your perfect manicure. Slapping on layers of polish will increase your chances of getting smudges and nicks as the paint will take much longer to dry completely. To avoid such accidents, apply thin coats of the paint to ensure faster drying.

Always wait for a few minutes before adding more layers of polish. Also, paint it in just one direction to achieve a smooth finish.

Avoid hot water

If you're looking for a manicure that lasts, then avoid contact with hot water for at least six hours after getting a manicure. Hot water can ruin your hard work, so wear gloves while doing water related chores and save your polish from chipping.

On the other hand, cold water will be your savior. Dip your nails into a bowl of ice water for 1-2 minutes. This will set and dry your polish in a matter of minutes.

Don't shake the bottle

DO NOT shake your bottle before applying the nail paint. Shaking creates air bubbles which should always be avoided if you're looking for an immaculate manicure. When air gets trapped inside the bottle, it creates froth making your nails chip faster.

Instead of shaking, roll your bottle in your hands and see the difference.

Don't skip the base coat

Just like a good primer can keep your make-up looking flawless every day, using a base coat will provide the same service to your nails. A layer of base coat can easily extend the wear of your manicure by at least a couple of days.

Soaking a cotton swab in rubbing alcohol or white vinegar and applying to your nails before the base coat will help in sealing the natural oils and giving an even finish to your manicure.

Don't cut your cuticles

Cutting your cuticles is a major health risk. Even beauty experts agree that cuts can easily get infected and it's not an ideal to commit this sin. Rather, push them back using cuticle pusher tool. This will prevent the paint from sticking to the cuticles which can heft the polish from the nail bed and cause chipping.

If you don't have a cuticle oil handy, make your own using a combination of olive and coconut oil. You can even add a few drops of your favorite essential oil to the mixture. Apply your homemade oil directly to your cuticles and gently massage. Source: TOI

HOME REMEDIES TO INCREASE PLATELET COUNT

Known as thrombocytopenia in medical terms, low platelet count is a health disorder in which your blood platelets are lower than normal.

Platelets are the tiniest among the blood cells, much smaller than red and white blood cells. They aid in blood clotting and help in preventing blood loss from the body, in case of injury. With a life span of 5 to 9 days, they are present in a very large number in our body.

Reasons of low platelet count

Loss of platelets is a serious problem as it leads to blood loss from our body. There can be two reasons behind less number of platelets - either they are getting destroyed or enough are not getting produced. This could be due to various reasons including:

- Reduced production of platelets due to anaemia, viral infections, leukaemia, chemotherapy, excessive alcohol consumption and deficiency of Vitamin B12.
- Presence of platelets in the spleen due to any severe liver disease or cancer.
- Breakdown of platelets due to health problems like ITP, TTP, bacterial infection in blood, reaction to medicines and autoimmune disease.

Some symptoms of low platelets can be fatigue, weakness, prolonged bleeding from cuts, rashes on skin, bleeding through urine or stool. But with some changes in lifestyle and by following few home remedies, blood platelet count can be increased.

Below are some simple home remedies to increase the blood platelet count.

Papaya and papaya leaves

Papaya and its leaves both are very helpful in increasing the platelet count in our body, says a research conducted by Asian institute of science and technology, Malaysia in 2009. You can consume ripe papaya and drink the juice of its leaves every day till the time your platelet count doesn't come to normal. You can also drink papaya juice and add a little lemon juice to it.

Pumpkin and its seeds

The nutrients in pumpkin are helpful in producing protein effectively, which is very important for producing platelets. Pumpkin also has Vitamin A which helps in the production of platelets in our body. So, regular consumption of pumpkin and its seeds helps us in increasing our platelet count.

Lemon juice

Lemon provides our body with a good amount of Vitamin C. Vitamin C helps in improving the platelet count. Not only this, Vitamin C also improves our immunity which in turn is very useful

THROMBOCYTOPENIA, A HEALTH DISORDER

- A low platelet count, medically known as thrombocytopenia, is a health disorder in which your blood has a lower than normal number of platelets.
- Platelets are the smallest of the blood cells that aid in blood clotting by forming plugs in blood vessel holes. The platelets circulate in the blood with an average lifespan of 5 to 9 days.
- A normal platelet count in a healthy person ranges from 150,000 to 450,000 platelets per microlitre of blood. When the count is below 150,000 per microlitre, it is considered a low platelet count.

for preventing free radical damage of platelets.

Amla (Indian gooseberries)

Amla is also rich in Vitamin C and provides all the benefits that lemon does. In addition to this, amla is rich in antioxidants and thus helps in preventing numerous health problems which can lead to low platelet count.

Beet root

Beet root also prevents the free radical damage of platelets and helps in increasing its number. Therefore, consuming a glass of beet root juice can greatly help in increasing the number of platelets.

Wheat grass

A study published in International Journal of Universal pharmacy and Life

Sciences states that wheatgrass can be beneficial in increasing the number of platelets in our blood. This happens because wheatgrass is high in chlorophyll, with a molecular structure like that of haemoglobin molecule in our body. You can consume half a cup of wheatgrass juice with a little lemon juice for increasing its effectiveness.

Vitamin C is a nutrient that enhances iron absorption by binding itself with iron. This prevents the formation of insoluble and unabsorbable iron compounds.

Aloe Vera juice

Aloe Vera helps in blood purification process. It is also effective in preventing blood infections. All this leads to increase in blood platelet count and treats the problem of low platelets effectively.

ARTIFICIAL SWEETENERS MAY NOT BE RISK FREE

People hoping to lose a few pounds by substituting artificial sweeteners for regular sugar may end up disappointed, suggests a fresh look at past research.

The review of 37 studies suggests the use of so-called non-nutritive sweeteners could be linked to weight gain and other undesirable outcomes like high blood pressure and type 2 diabetes.

"From all that research, there was no consistent evidence of a long term benefit from the sweetener, but there was evidence for weight gain and increased risks of other cardiometabolic outcomes," said lead author Meghan Azad, of the University of Manitoba in Winnipeg, Canada.

Artificial sweeteners like aspartame, sucralose and stevioside are growing increasingly popular as evidence mounts that sugar is fueling the obesity epidemic, Azad and colleagues write in CMAJ.

The artificial sweeteners are chemically different than sugar. They activate receptors on the tongue that lets the brain know the person is eating or drinking something sweet.

Past research on these sweeteners shows a mixed bag of results, including links to weight gain, as well as links to weight loss, according to the authors of the new review.

For the analysis, they looked through the medical literature for studies examining possible links between artificial sweeteners and weight or health issues like obesity.

The researchers found seven randomized controlled trials, which are considered the gold-standard of medical research. Some of the trials, for example, compared people who drank artificially sweetened beverages to people who drank water. The researchers also found 30 studies that followed people using the sweeteners over time.

They found no link between the use of artificial sweeteners and changes in body mass index (BMI), which is a measure of weight in relation to height, among the 1,003 people in the randomized controlled trials. They also didn't find a link between the sweeteners and other outcomes.

Among the 405,907 people included in the 30 other studies, the researchers found that artificial sweeteners were tied to a small increase in BMI, weight, waist size, obesity, high blood pressure, heart problems and metabolic syndrome.

"I think it's cause for some caution and rethinking whether or not these products are without any effect," Azad told Reuters Health.

The researchers caution, however, that the studies that followed people over time may be biased since artificial sweeteners are promoted as a treatment for conditions like obesity or diabetes. Also, the randomized controlled trials were relatively short.

"It's possible that different sweeteners have different effects, but we were not able to examine that because of the studies available," she said.

The risks and benefits of these sweeteners need to be evaluated, but the science examining those benefits is lacking, said Sai Das of the Jean Mayer USDA Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging at Tufts University in Boston, who was not involved with the new study.

"It is time for the science to look at what - if any - benefits there are to see if that is meaningful enough to outweigh the risks that have been highlighted," Das told Reuters Health.

Until there is better research, Das said, people should use be cautious about using artificial sweeteners.

LIFE ON EARTH LIKELY BEGAN ON LAND, NOT SEA

LOS ANGELES (TIP): Life on Earth may have begun on land rather than in the sea, suggests a study that pushes back the time for the emergence of microbial life on land by 580 million years.

Researchers at the University of New South Wales in Australia scoured the landscape of the Pilbara region of Western Australia looking for clues to how ancient microbes could have produced the abundant stromatolites that were discovered there in the 1970s.

Stromatolites are round, multi-layered mineral structures that range from the size of golf balls to weather balloons and represent the oldest evidence that there were living organisms on Earth 3.5 billion years ago.

Scientists who believed life began in the ocean thought these mineral formations had formed in shallow, salty seawater.

However, researchers found the evidence that the stromatolites had not formed in salt water but instead in conditions more like the hot springs.

The discovery pushed back the time for the emergence of microbial life on land by 580 million years and also bolsters a paradigm-shifting hypothesis that life began, not in the sea, but on land, researchers said.

The model for life beginning on land rather than in the sea could not only reshape our idea about the origin of life and where else it might be, but even change the way we view ourselves, researchers said.

For four decades, ever since the research vessel Alvin discovered deep-sea hydrothermal vents that were habitats for specialised bacteria and worms that looked like something out of a science-fiction novel, scientists have theorised that these mineral- and gas-pumping vents were just what was needed for life to begin.

However David Deamer from University of California - Santa Cruz in the US thought the theory had flaws.

For instance, molecules essential for the origin of life would be dispersed too quickly into a vast ocean, he said and salty seawater would inhibit some of the processes he knew are necessary for life to begin.

Trekking to volcanoes from Russia to Iceland and hiking through the Pilbara desert, Deamer and his colleagues' observations of volcanic activity suggested the idea that hot springs provided the right environment for the beginning of life.

According to him, ancient Earth consisted of a huge ocean spotted with volcanic land masses. Rain would fall on the land, creating pools of fresh water that would be heated by geothermal energy and then cooled by runoff.

NOW MAKE, SHARE GIFS WITH FACEBOOK CAMERA

SAN FRANCISCO (TIP): Facebook has quietly rolled out a new feature that allows users to make short "GIFs" using the in-app camera.

The GIF could be customised using several frames and filters and shared on Facebook, Engadget reported on Saturday.

Users can tap the camera icon on the app and then swipe right to reach the GIF-making interface.

However, the GIFs can only be shared on Facebook and when saved on device, they come in video format.

Though Facebook has not made any public announcement about this, the feature is available to a few users and it is unclear if everyone will get access to it soon.

Earlier this year, Facebook introduced a number of "Giphy-powered" features to its app, followed by release of GIF comments.

ROBOT LAWYER CAN NOW FIGHT ROGUE LANDLORDS, CREDIT CARD FRAUD

LONDON (TIP): The "world's first robot lawyer"—which has so far overturned parking tickets worth USD 10 million in the UK and the US—can now help people tackle legal disputes regarding landlords, credit card fraud and harassment at work free of cost.

The online tool, developed by 20-year-old British student Joshua Browder at Stanford University in the US, has been upgraded to fight legal disputes in 1,000 different areas.

These include fighting landlords over security deposits and house repairs, and helping people report fraud to their credit card agency.

"There's so much exploitation going on where landlords aren't behaving properly. I'm really excited about how it can help people," said Browder.

"I really hope it will help people stand up for their rights for free and instantly," he said.

To get robot advice, users need to type their problem into the 'DoNotPay' website, which directs them to a chat bot that can solve their legal issue.

It can draft letters and offer advice on problems from credit card fraud to airline compensation, The Telegraph reported.

It can also understand complex disputes such as employment rights and offer a range of suggestions.

With problems around parental leave and harassment at work it provides options with different levels of formality.

It can send a casual letter, an official one, and file a complaint to the regulator.

The tool can fight parking tickets in just 30 seconds.

DoNotPay had negated more than 375,000 tickets worth around USD 10 million in the UK, New York and Seattle.

At present the robot lawyer can solve problems that involve a single document, such as filling out a form or writing a letter.

Browder is now planning to develop the tool so it can handle more complicated processes. Source: PTI

Most users can't detect fake news on social media

LONDON (TIP): As the spread of fake news on social media gains momentum, researchers now reveal that people can detect a fake image of a real-world scene only 60 per cent of the time.

Even then, they can only tell what is wrong with the image only 45 per cent of the time, the researchers added.

The high-quality of these fake images were to be blamed for this, said the team from University of Warwick.

"This has serious implications," said Sophie Nightingale, PhD student and lead author, adding "People are exposed to these fakes on a daily basis through social networking sites, the Internet and the media." To reach this conclusion, the researchers set up an online test that used a bank of 40 images created from 10 original images sourced from Google Images.

Six of the original images were subjected to five different types of manipulation, including physically implausible and physically plausible manipulations, to create 30 manipulated images.

Over 700 participants in the online test were shown 10 random images that included each of the five manipulation types and five original images.

Participants never saw a manipulation or original form of the same image twice.

Sixty per cent of images were correctly identified as being manipulated.

"We found that people were better at detecting physically implausible manipulations but not any better at locating these manipulations, compared to physically plausible manipulations," explained Derrick Watson, study co-author, in a paper published in the journal Cognitive Research: Principles and Implications.

"We need to work to find better ways to protect people from the negative effects of photo manipulation, and we're now exploring a number of ways that might help people to better detect fakes," said Kimberley Wade, another co-author.

NEW ROBOTS CAN FOLLOW SPOKEN INSTRUCTIONS

WASHINGTON (TIP): Scientists, including those of Indian origin, have developed robots that can follow spoken instructions, an advance that may make it easier for people to interact with automated machines at home and workplaces.

"The issue we're addressing is language grounding, which means having a robot take natural language commands and generate behaviours that successfully complete a task," said Dilip Arumugam, from Brown University in the US.

"The problem is that commands can have different levels of abstraction, and that can cause a robot to plan its actions inefficiently or fail to complete the task at all," Arumugam said.

For example, someone in a warehouse working side-by-side with a robotic forklift might say to the robotic partner, "Grab that pallet".

That is a highly abstract command that implies a number of smaller sub-steps — lining up the lift, putting the forks underneath and hoisting it up. However, other common commands might be more fine-grained, involving only a single action: "Tilt the forks back a little", for example.

Those different levels of abstraction can cause problems for current robot language models, the researchers said.

MICROSOFT PROFIT BEATS EXPECTATIONS ON STRONG CLOUD DEMAND

SAN FRANCISCO (TIP): Microsoft on Thursday reported strong fourth-quarter earnings on the back of its fast-growing cloud computing business, stoking optimism that the once-stagnant company has found a new groove.

The results were the clearest sign yet that the strategy put in place by Chief Executive Satya Nadella when he assumed the top job in 2014 is paying off. He has shifted the company's focus away from a dying personal computer software business and reinventing it as a provider of cloud computing and subscription-based software.

"Our technology world view of an intelligent cloud and an intelligent edge is resonating with customers everywhere," Nadella said on the company's earnings conference call with investors on Thursday afternoon.

Most notably, revenue from the cloud unit, which includes the flagship Azure platform and server products, rose about 11 per cent to $7.43 billion in the fiscal fourth quarter ended June 30.

Analysts on average had expected cloud revenue of $7.32 billion, according to data and analytics firm FactSet. Revenue from Azure, which competes directly with Amazon.com's market-leading AWS division, nearly doubled in the quarter.

Highlighting Azure's growth were notable increases to Microsoft's long-term unearned revenue, which rose by more than 61 per cent year-over-year. The metric is used to indicate long-term commitments for services and products, said Kim Forrest, vice president and senior equity analyst at Fort Pitt Capital Group, a portfolio management firm.

In a bid to continue this momentum, Microsoft last week launched Azure Stack, a new service that allows customers to run a local version of the company's cloud technology.

"This isn't just a one-quarter wonder," Forrest said. "Amazon is going to be paying attention to this."

Michael Turits, analyst at Raymond James & Associates, noted that Azure is smaller than Amazon's service but that it is growing faster. "I think it is appealing well to existing enterprise customers who might not immediately be drawn to the Amazon platform," he said.

Beyond cloud, Microsoft's various businesses mostly performed well.

The commercial offering of Office 365 was up 43 per cent while Dynamics 365, Microsoft's customer relationship management and enterprise resource planning service, saw a year-over-year increase of 74 per cent.

Revenue dropped 2 per cent in the personal computer division, which includes Windows 10 and Microsoft's line of Surface hardware. The company said it recorded $306 million in restructuring charges following a reorganization of its sales and marketing teams that was announced earlier this month. The restructuring resulted in layoffs for thousands of Microsoft employees.

"I don't think the layoffs are a worry at all," said Jan Dawson, chief analyst at Jackdaw Research. "They're just part of the ongoing transition Microsoft is going through as cloud grows and its legacy business shrinks."

Net income doubles

Microsoft's net income more than doubled to $6.51 billion or 83 cents per share in the quarter, from $3.12 billion or 39 cents per share in the year-earlier period.

RIL Q1 PROFIT UP 28%

NEW DELHI (TIP): Reliance Industries Ltd (RIL) today reported its highest quarterly consolidated net profit of Rs 9,108 crore in three months to June 30 on the back of higher petrochemical margins and one-time gain from sale of African asset. Net profit in the April-June quarter of the current fiscal at Rs 9,108 crore was 28% higher than Rs 7,113 crore in the same period of the last financial year, RIL said.

Revenue grew 26.7% to Rs 90,537 crore primarily on account of increase in prices and volumes of refining and petrochemical products, partially offset by lower prices and volumes from oil and gas exploration and production business.

RELIANCE JIO TO RAISE RS 20K CR VIA RIGHTS ISSUE

Reliance Jio will raise Rs 20,000 crore through a rights issue to meet funding requirements.

WIPRO TO BUY BACK SHARES WORTH RS 11,000 CRORE

Wipro on Thursday posted a 1.2% rise in its consolidated net profit at Rs 2,076.7 crore for the April-June quarter. Besides, the company's Board has announced a share buyback proposal of Rs 11,000 crore entailing 34.3 crore equity shares at Rs 320 apiece.

ICICI offers instant loan via ATMs

NEW DELHI (TIP): ICICI Bank has introduced instant personal loans up to Rs 15 lakh through ATMs through a digital and completely paperless procedure.

This service enables existing salaried customers of the bank to get pre-qualified personal loans in their savings account instantly, in a completely digital and paperless manner.

The facility improves customer experience as it offers a bouquet of unique features: swift application in simple steps, multiple eligible loan amount options up to Rs 15 lakh based on pre-checked CIBIL score and instant transfer of money to the customer's account.

It also incorporates an additional level of authentication in order to make the security of the offering robust.

Wipro plans Rs 11,000-crore share buyback

BENGALURU (TIP): Wipro reported a 0.3% rise in revenue in constant currency in the first quarter that beat analyst expectations, pushing up its stock by about 5% in morning trade on the New York Stock Exchange. In April, the company had said it expects to de-grow by 2% or report at best flat revenue in the June quarter.

Its decision to buy back Rs 11,000-crore ($1.7-billion) shares at a price of Rs 320 a piece — the second such move in two years — will also bring cheer to investors. The price is 24% higher than the average price of the stock for the last six months. The growth still remains way behind that of larger rivals Infosys and TCS, as a drop in growth in sectors such as healthcare and communications more than offset the rise in banking, financial service and insurance (BFSI) and its India business.

For the quarter ended June 30, Wipro reported a revenue of $1.97 billion — a sequential rise of just 0.9%, which translates into incremental revenue of only $17 million.

INDIA EXPECTED TO ACHIEVE GROWTH RATE OF 7.4% IN 2017

NEW DELHI (TIP): India is expected to achieve the projected growth rate of 7.4% in 2017 and further up 7.6% next year on strong consumption demand, with South Asia leading the growth chart in Asia and the Pacific, an ADB supplement report said on Thursday.

"India, the sub-region's largest economy, is expected to achieve previous growth projections of 7.4% in 2017 and 7.6% in 2018, primarily from strong consumption," the supplement of Asian Development Bank (ADB) Outlook 2017 said.

According to the report, South Asia will be the fastest growing of all sub-regions in Asia and the Pacific, with growth on track to meet original projections of 7% in 2017 and 7.2% in 2018.

The growth prospects in developing Asia for 2017 have improved on the back of stronger than expected export demand in the first quarter of this year, it said.

In the supplement, ADB has upgraded its growth outlook in the Asian region to 5.9% in 2017 from 5.7% and to 5.8% for 2018 from 5.7%.

The smaller uptick for the next year reflects a cautious view on this sustainability of this export push, it added. "Developing Asia is off to a good start this year with improved exports pushing growth prospects for the rest of 2017," said Yasuyuki Sawada, ADB's Chief Economist.

"Despite lingering uncertainties surrounding the strength of the global recovery, we feel that the region's economies are well placed to face potential shocks to the outlook," Sawada said.

On his victory, he said "Personally this is an emotional moment for me."

Speaking about his humble background as a farmer's son, Mr Kovind said, "It has been raining in Delhi since the morning. Rains remind me of my village, of our kachcha home with walls of mud and a roof that could not repel water during the monsoon. My siblings and I used to stand and wait for the rains to end. Today there are many Ram Nath Kovinds who are getting wet in the rain, working hard, toiling in the fields for one square meal in the evening. connections to Russia, officials said on Wednesday, July 19. The three men are the closest associates of the President to be called to speak to lawmakers involved in probing Russian meddling in the 2016 US presidential election and possible collusion with the Trump campaign.

Trump, who came into office in January, has been dogged by allegations that his campaign officials were connected to Russia, which US intelligence agencies have accused of interfering in last year's election. Trump has denied any collusion. The US Senate Judiciary Committee said on Wednesday that it had called Trump's eldest son, Donald Trump Jr, and Manafort to testify on July 26 at a hearing.

The president's son released emails earlier this month that showed him eagerly agreeing to meet last year with a woman he was told was a Russian government lawyer who might have damaging information about Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton.

The meeting was also attended by Manafort and Kushner, who is now a senior adviser at the White House. Kushner is scheduled to be interviewed by the Senate Intelligence Committee on Monday, July 24, behind closed doors. A special counsel, Robert Mueller, is also conducting an investigation of Russian meddling in the US election and any collusion between Moscow and Trump's campaign.

The Senate Intelligence Committee is conducting one of the main investigations of Russia's meddling in the 2016 US election and possible collusion by Trump associates, but the Judiciary committee has been looking into related issues.

The public Judiciary hearing will look into rules governing the registration of agents working for foreign governments in the United States and foreign attempts to influence US elections. - Reuters

About one in eight persons who voted for President Donald Trump said they would not do so again after witnessing Trump's tumultuous first six months in office, according to a Reuters/Ipsos poll of 2016 voters.

While most of the people who voted for Trump on November 8 said they would back him again, the erosion of support within his winning coalition of older, disaffected, mostly white voters poses a potential challenge for the president.

Speakers also pointed out that Ambassador Das was instrumental in co-sponsoring the International Yoga Day celebrations this year with the New York City Public Advocate's Office and the Parks Department. Despite her short stint in New York, Ambassador Das was also credited with engaging several US Congressmen and Senators as well as New York city elected officials.

"When we had a welcome dinner for you over a year ago, there were more than 500 people and at your farewell dinner today we have much less," said Andy Bhatia. "It is because many are sad to see you leave so soon and have decided not to be here and have you see them in tears."

FIA chairman Ramesh Patel was exuberant yet emotional while introducing Ambassador Das at the event.

"You have been very helpful and gracious to the cause of FIA and India Day Parade and we wish you all the best," said Patel.

application (Form I-485), the indictment alleges. Cheema and Person A were married in Dallas County on June 15, 2015. Khaleeq allegedly arranged the marriage, advised Cheema regarding the filing of the Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130), and represented the parties at the interview with U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS).

After Cheema and Person A had been married, Khaleeq advised the parties on preparing the I-130 petition and supporting documents needed to make the marriage appear legitimate, the indictment alleges, adding that Khaleeq's advice included but was not limited to, joint bank accounts, tax returns, bills concerning their joint residence, and other fraudulent evidence, including photos. On July 10, 2015, the parties filed Forms I-130 and I-485 with USCIS.

The indictment further alleges that from Jan. 26, 2016 through March 7, 2017, Khaleeq, Cheema and Person A had several discussions regarding the immigration process and the documentary evidence needed to represent Cheema and Person A as a bona fide married couple for the purposes of obtaining the immigration benefit.

In addition, the indictment alleges that Khaleeq coached Person A how to address the questions that would be posed during the USCIS interview process. Among other pieces of advice that he gave, Khaleeq allegedly instructed Person A specifically, to tell the USCIS adjudications officer that he cohabitated with Cheema even though that was a false statement. Khaleeq also advised Person A to leave some articles of clothing in Cheema's house to make it appear that he was living there, the indictment says, and that the three parties discussed filing joint tax returns to provide additional evidence and discussed how long Person A and Cheema should remain married in order for her to obtain her U.S. permanent residence.

Khaleeq has an eponymous, Khaleeq Law Firm PLLC, in Dallas, where he is the lead attorney. The firm deals with a range of legal issues from bankruptcy, technology, criminal, family, health care, insurance, intellectual property, real estate, wills, trusts, immigration, juvenile, workers compensation, and non-profits, plus other areas.

Khaleeq has a Bachelor of Science degree in Electrical Engineering from the University of Texas, Austin, Masters of Business Administration (MBA) from Rice University in Houston, Texas and a Juris Doctorate degree from Creighton University, in Omaha, Nebraska, according to the website of the law firm.

The website also says Khaleeq "has been honored with numerous community service awards including the FBI Director's Community Leadership Award for Iowa and Nebraska (2009), the Omaha Chamber of Commerce for the Leadership Omaha Class (2009-2010) and the Nebraska Bar Association for Leadership (2010). He is actively involved in several non-profit, civic, religious organizations as President and Board Member, the site adds.

FRENCH MILITARY CHIEF RESIGNS AFTER ROW WITH MACRON

PARIS: France's top military chief resigned after a war of words with Emmanuel Macron over budget cuts that tested the new president's authority.

The row between Macron and General Pierre de Villiers erupted last week when the chief of staff told a parliamentary committee he would not allow the armed forces to be "screwed" by the government's plans to slash 850 million ($980 million) from this year's defence budget.

Macron, 39, slapped down the 60-year-old 5-star general in front of army chiefs at their annual summer party last week, saying "I am the boss" and that he deeply regretted the budget dispute had been dragged into the "public sphere".

De Villiers, a widely respected figure who had been in the job for three years and was popular with the rank and file, said he had no choice but to stand down.

"I no longer feel able to ensure the sustainability of the model of the armed forces that I think is necessary to guarantee the protection of France and the French people," he said in a statement.

On Wednesday, Macron stood by his handling of the disagreement, telling France 2 television that de Villiers was a "fine soldier" it was "not the role" of the chief of staff to question the budget.

The president also reiterated his promise to raise the defence budget again in 2018. "I'm behind our troops," he assured.

He named General Francois Lecointre, a 55-year-old hero of the Balkans wars, as de Villiers's replacement.

Seen as one of the finest officers of his generation, de Villiers's departure triggered howls of indignation from the opposition.

The leader of the hard-left France Unbowed, Jean-Luc Melenchon, called it an "enormous mistake" on Macron's part.

De Villiers's leaked remarks about the budget were made behind closed doors to a committee that expected him to "respond frankly", Melenchon argued.

Far-right leader Marine Le Pen, whom Macron beat in the presidential run-off election, claimed de Villiers's resignation showed "the very serious abuses and worrying limits" of Macron's leadership.

Damien Abad, a lawmaker from the conservatives Republicans, also took issue with what he termed Macron's "excessive authoritarianism".

De Villiers had repeatedly complained that the military was overstretched and said he saw it as his duty to inform politicians.

In a Facebook "letter to a young recruit" last week, he wrote: "As everyone has their shortcomings, no one should be blindly followed."

Macron's defence cuts — part of a 4.5 billion reduction in spending aimed at reducing France's budget deficit — were viewed by the military as a betrayal after his strong show of support for the armed forces during his first weeks in office. Hours after being inaugurated Macron visited a hospital treating injured soldiers and his maiden foreign trip as leader took him to Mali to meet French troops engaged in counter-terrorism operations.

Today, he is set to visit an air base in the southwestern city of Istres, addressing the military for the first time since de Villiers' departure, with Lecointre accompanying him.

The president, his office said, will "reiterate his support for the armed forces, reminding them of his campaign pledge to increase the defence budget as well as his ambitious plans for them in a difficult international environment".

Retired general Dominique Trinquand, an adviser to Macron during his campaign, said the row had cast a pall over his otherwise "remarkable" debut.

"This is a hitch that will probably be a bit difficult to get past," he said in an interview with AFP.

Uniformed troops formed a guard of honour and applauded de Villiers as he left the defence ministry, according to a one-minute video posted with the message "Merci" (thank you) on the chiefs of staff Twitter account.

Macron says the belt-tightening is temporary and that he remains committed to boosting defence spending to 2.0 per cent of gross domestic product by 2025 (around 50 billion), in line with Nato targets. (AFP)

Mosul's Christians face dilemma after Islamic State

ARBIL (IRAQ) (TIP): The jihadists may have been ousted from their Iraqi hometown of Mosul but many Christians like Haitham Behnam refuse to go back and trade in the stability of their new lives.

"There's no security, no protection for Christians back there," said the former resident of the largest city in northern Iraq.

"It's better for us to stay here and keep our mouths shut," said the man in his 40s who resettled in the Iraqi Kurdish capital of Arbil in 2014 after the Islamic State (IS) jihadist group seized control of Mosul.

"They came to see us in our shops. They told us: 'We have nothing against you. If we're bothering you, tell us.' A week later, it was 'Christians out!'" recalled Behnam, who used to deal in ready-to-wear clothing.

Under the brutal rule of IS, Mosul's Christian community of around 35,000 was handed an ultimatum: convert to Islam, pay a special tax imposed on non-Muslims, or risk being executed unless they leave town.

Since the Iraqi authorities on July 10 announced their recapture of Mosul after a battle that raged for several months, tens of thousands of Christians who have rebuilt their lives in the past three years face a dilemma.

"We couldn't go back even if we wanted to," said Behnam, who fondly remembers "a paradise-like life" before Mosul fell under jihadist control.

His polo shirt and trousers are smeared with grease from his new life as a mechanic working in an Arbil suburb, a change he has had to undergo in order to put food on the table for his wife and two children.

"There's no security (in Mosul). People were brainwashed over the past three years," said Behnam, a Catholic.

"Even the children have become Daesh, they've been taught to slit throats," he said using a pejorative Arabic name for IS.

A customer at the small workshop that Behnam rents was quick to agree. "If I was a Christian, I wouldn't go back to Mosul until its residents prove to me that they're ready to accept me," said Omar Fawaz, a Muslim from the east of the city. Once the battle for Mosul was over, his parents had returned, only to find their home occupied by the victorious security forces.

"Neighbours told us to take the house of a Christian who used to live four doors down," said the 29-year engineer.

"The mentality hasn't changed. The imams in the mosques preach against IS... but the Salafists (radical Muslims) believe Christians have no place there."

Another Christian Maslawi (resident of Mosul), Essam Boutros, a father of four, had to restart from scratch after having abandoned five shops and two houses in the city in 2014.

He had to sell his car to pay the first three months of rent for a shop in Arbil and used his business contacts and reputation to open credit lines with suppliers in neighbouring Turkey.

Now his impressive two-floor store displays counters loaded with perfumes and cosmetics as well as racks of brightly coloured clothes for young girls. (AFP)

China's attempts to lobby against India suffer as US-China talks hit hard rock

BEIJING (TIP): China's hopes of getting western support for its stance against India dimmed as Chinese negotiators suffer a serious setback during annual US-China Strategic Economic Dialogue in Washington on Wednesday. Negotiations between the two sides got into a deadlock as American negotiators demanded an end to Chinese dumping of steel and a reduction in the adverse trade deficit created by Chinese exporters.

Chinese envoys are already facing an uphill task trying to convince western countries that the world's biggest democracy was actually an aggressor on the border with the second biggest economy. It is much easier for China to persuade countries that depend on its largesse like Pakistan that it was a victim at the Doklam plateau where Indian troops have allegedly trespassed into Chinese territory.

A joint press conference that was to be held by officials of the two countries was abruptly cancelled.

"The press conference was canceled because there was nothing to say. Nothing has been achieved in specific terms," Sourabh Gupta, a senior specialist at the Institute of China America Studies in Washington told TNN. "The US came down very hard on China and I think China balked," he said.

The economic dialogue has resulted in a setback in US-China relationship, which will make it more difficult for Chinese diplomats to get Washington to accept their point of view on the border standoff with India, sources said.

The Trump administration has repeatedly said that Chinese dumping of steel and other goods has led to huge loss of American jobs. During the negotiations, US commerce secretary Wilbur Ross said that China's $347 trade deficit with his country was not the result of natural market forces but the absence of "fair, equitable and reciprocal" relationship between the two countries.

"We must create more balance in our trade by increasing exports of made-in-America goods to China," Ross said adding, "There are significant opportunities to do this if we can work together to remove the significant barriers that continue to exist".

Chinese Vice-Premier Wang Yang, who participated in the talks, spoke about the importance of cooperation between the two countries in general terms but had nothing specific to report in terms of outcomes.

"Good cooperation between China and the US, the world's two largest economies, will not only benefit the businesses and people of the two countries, but the entire world," China's state media quoted him as saying. (PTI)

DERBY (TIP): Harmanpreet Kaur produced one of the greatest ODI knocks in women's cricket as India stormed into the World Cup final after beating Australia by 36 runs in the second semifinal here today.

It is only the second time that India have entered the summit clash of the global event, having lost to Australia in the final of the 2005 edition. Skipper Mithali Raj and senior pacer Jhulan Goswami were part of that team.

India will meet hosts England in the final at the Lord's on Sunday.

Harmanpreet smashed her way to a career-best 171 off 115 balls, leaving the Australian bowlers in a daze as India put up an imposing 281/4 after rain reduced the match to 42-overs a side.

This was India's highest ever total against Australia and proved to be match-winning even as Alex Blackwell's power-packed 90 took them to 245 in 40.1 overs.

The day belonged to Harmanpreet as her innings could well be termed as one which will be remembered for years to come. It drew comparisons with Kapil Dev's historic 175 against Zimbabwe at Tunbridge Wells during the 1983 campaign.

After a dry run during the better part of the league stage, India's most sought after T20 cricketer stepped up just when it mattered the most. After a useful 60 against New Zealand in the virtual quarterfinal, Harmanpreet upped the ante like never before. Harmanpreet's third ODI century was embellished with 20 fours and seven sixes.

With enough runs on the board, confident Indian seamers Goswami and Shikha Pandey came up with brilliant opening spells. Opener Beth Mooney and skipper Meg Lanning were cleaned up by Pandey and Goswami, respectively. Ellyse Perry (38) and Elyse Villani (75) added 105 runs for the fourth wicket but it was always a catching up game for the defending champions.

Blackwell then gave India some jittery moments, hitting 90 off 56 balls with 10 fours and three sixes before she was bowled by Sharma. The Derby ground has proved to be a happy hunting one for India as they have won all five matches here. Source: PTI

- In the last 40 balls of her knock, Harman hammered 103 runs with the help of 13 fours and six sixes
- Batting at number four, Harmanpreet Kaur smashed 115-ball unbeaten knock of 171 runs to set up India to a huge total of 281 for 4 in 42 overs. Daughter of a clerk in the local District Court became the first woman to be signed by Sydney Thunder in the second edition of T20 Women's Big Bash League (WBBL) in Australia. She would also be playing in the England Kia T20 League in August.

Three Wimbledon ties face match-fixing probe

LONDON (TIP): Wimbledon came under the scanner with three matches at this year's tournament set to be investigated for possible match-fixing, according to the Tennis Integrity Unit (TIU). Two qualifying matches at Roehampton and one from the main Wimbledon draw triggered some bizarre betting patterns and are to be examined further, said the anti-corruption body that polices professional tennis.

"These will be assessed and reviewed in keeping with the TIU match alert policy," TIU said on its website. TIU's match alert policy means that the unit checks on irregularities such as strange betting tendencies, but it insisted the alerts are not evidence of match-fixing.

One match from June's

French Open will also be looked at — just four of 53 alerts received by TIU since April, although the majority came from matches at the lower level Challenger, Futures and ITF Women's tours.

There has been a decline in the number of alerts received by TIU this year with 83 triggered thus far — 38 fewer than at the same stage last year. Source: AFP

Once play starts, it's up to the boys: Shastri

COLOMBO (TIP): Soon after arriving in Sri Lanka for the Test series, Ravi Shastri, the Indian team coach, had the opportunity to do what he does best — he provided a public pep talk to the Indian team, for the second day running.

"They know their job, they are professional cricketers," he said, playing down the role of the coach, at the pre-tour press briefing here. "Once they step on the field they take over.

That is how it should be."

"My role will be to get the guys in a frame of mind that they get out and express themselves and play fearless brand of cricket," he added.

A couple of days ago, Matthew Hayden, the former Australian opener, had praised Shastri's communication skills. "I have done commentary with him and I know that he is a strong communicator, which is critical for the coach's role," Hayden had said, among other things.

Predictions for the month of JULY, 2017

Today there is computerized voice type analysis. My observation is you, Scorpio, Taurus and Libra are blessed with the baritone which persuades people to do your bidding. This is certainly yoga time or yoke time or partnerships of all possible sorts. I suggest yoga and partnership with God will be exceptionally fruitful. Enjoy it. Life is sweet but short.

Aries

Ganesha says - A larger canvas for you this month. You reach out in every way you can - from meetings and rendezvous to fax, email, voice-mail, the works, in short. Not just to people, please remember, but places. The environment, eco-concerns, wider issues also keep you busy. And how: A huge level of awareness and commitment is to be seen in you this week. You are the world, now. Not in confrontation but in fine accord.

Taurus

The growing awareness of last month develops further. After the pleasures and pain of the material plane, your mind is irresistibly drawn to a higher level. You set your sights on a higher and superior consciousness, spirituality, the cosmic cycle of karma. Also, research, higher studies and imbibing knowledge for its own sake. Travel of the mind, and perhaps actual journeys, too, not just spiritual ones, keep you firmly anchored in this world even while you seek another. Conference, business meets, seminars, study tours, pilgrimages.

Gemini

A somewhat taxing and certainly demanding month lies ahead. A little stress may develop. You could be over-wrought perhaps about unfairness in your work / business and somewhat depleted in health. At the same time, there are useful discussions, meaningful dialogues with those to whom you can reveal your innermost thoughts. Perhaps a mystery could be revealed. The possibility is there, says Ganesha.

Cancer

A strengthening of commitment comes now - and it's really needed, too. Money will be easy, though not wonderful. Nor will your health. More rest will be very desirable to you as once again, all kinds of pulls could level you feeling as if your batteries are running low and you just can't cope with all that you're required to do. Your faith will energize you, as will your warm interactions with loved ones. Once again you focus very definitely on home, family, property, in several ways.

Leo

A time when Ganesha endows you with a large measure of satisfaction, the belief that you're going the right way to a better life. Harmony and contentment are your goals now. All that the preceding forecast was about is now sought to be put into action, or motion, by you. You get off to a dramatic, stylish start in the work arena. You are redefining your attitudes to home and career, refocusing on fresh goals in terms of advancement.

Virgo

A truly fine period, again, in which you find satisfaction in all spheres - work, family, love and marriage. You gain in effortless ways both at home and at work. Understanding and rapport with people who are part of your personal "think-tank" lends to an energizing effect on both money matters and affairs of the heart. You work with equal zest and energy as you play.

Libra

Energy, inspiration, enthusiasm all comes to you in a torrent with this new moon. The operative word here is new - most definitely. It's ideal for creating a new product / project / venture / piece of art / book / a symphony / poem. Creativity manifests itself even in getting a new job or a new addition to the family. Also, a wonderful time for those in the media, publicity, writing, copywriting, the e-world (and that in itself is really a universe, isn't it?)

Scorpio

A typical Scorpio with its emphasis on faith, religion, spirituality. You feel an urge to live less in the material world and more in the spiritual, but it is material concerns that will force themselves on your attention. Finances, joint-funds, debts and loans will all have to be dealt with or handled in some form or the other. If not your own, they could pertain to the family interactions of the last week.

Sagittarius

Much comes to you now, and in easy, harmonious ways; you don't have to struggle to achieve. Your efforts produce effects far beyond your expectations. Fun and games are embraced joyfully in a spirit of celebration. Don't let go of the cleanliness of communication and sharing you've established with those around you - friends as well as workmates. You realize and appreciate the role of good people in your life.

Capricorn

Solid gains - in this world and the higher one too make it a week of progress. You ponder on deeper questions, undertake further study / training / orientation and gain much in terms of ultimate wisdom and maturity. Good ideas at work, solid interaction with friends, family, mate or lover, all add to the creation of deeper ties. So, travel and ties with a whole new connotation. Not armchair travelling, but travel of the spirit.

Aquarius

Right now, you're really a fine person to know and this will continue, since it's a trend for the month. You are full of grace in your public position, and exercise authority with affection and charm. And that is probably the least of your gains, though it brings mind-bogglingly good results at work and in the family scene. You feel a little more internal, more reflective, more introspective.

Pisces

Your spiritual and emotional growth has been steady and sustained. It's a much larger canvas that you are painting on, once again, leaving your own individual imprint. You function as a part of a group or social organization, see your place in the world order and open up the vistas of your mind. Original studies, research, higher learning, these, hypothesis - even the media, and particularly television - are all part of your sphere.
